A Labor Crime
Quality Through the Dam
3d Armistice Day—Quiet
2 Italian Transformations

The New York Evening World makes the positive assertion that the Wall street explosion was planned and carried out by workmen that had been deprived of their work by blackmailing labor grafters.

Not Anarchists, seeking to destroy Wall street bankers, but men out of work seeking to kill a gang of eighty-five workmen that had taken their place, caused the explosion in Wall street, directly opposite the spot where the eighty-five hated workers were employed on the Stock Exchange annex.

All wondered why a bomb, supposedly intended for rich men, should have been exploded at twelve o'clock. Rich men do not go to lunch at twelve. They are safe indoors at that hour. But working men do pour out into the streets from their work at noon.

Investigation will prove or disprove the Evening World's story. If proved, it comes as one of many hard blows for organized labor.

Recent investigations by Samuel Untermyer, revealing in a week more of graft and dishonesty than all the opera comique investigations by government prosecutors have revealed in years, shows a most vicious condition in certain lines of industry.

Honest workmen unwilling to pay blackmail could not find employment. Decent builders unwilling to be blackmailed and pass the blackmail along to investors, could get no work, or could not finish the work if they undertook it.

Now a responsible newspaper makes the positive statement that organized workmen, driven to desperation by blackmailing and blacklisting that kept them out of work, sought revenge on other workers in a most horrible manner, destroying many innocent lives.

A lady with a strong, cheerful face, named Callahan, has two sons, Tim and Mike. When she goes to the Yale-Princeton football game she will be entitled to a front seat. For Tim is captain of the YALE football team and Mike is captain of the PRINCETON team.

Students of race horses have a saying "Quality comes through the dam." Galton, whose great book on heredity you should read, tells you that among humans also "Quality comes through the dam." Daughters, not sons, inherit the best qualities of their fathers. The sister of the great Augustus was a better "man" than he. Sons get their best qualities from their mothers. It was Alexander's wild, voluptuous, snake-dancing, husband-killing mother that made him conqueror of the world, not his mild father. Nancy Hanks made a Lincoln; Madame Bonaparte made Napoleon; Lincoln and Napoleon had second rate, slipshod fathers.

The country yesterday celebrated Armistice Day very mildly. Some whistles and sirens were sounded, and small boys tried to seem excited. Nobody WAS excited. The world soon forgets big things. Grass is growing where the barbed wire was, the French having rebuilt their country. The country is busy wondering what is the matter with prices and why we sell nothing abroad any more. Armistice Day was devoted to less than any ordinary Fourth of July, because, big as it was, this time means much less to America than the little war of 1776.

The Italians have settled with the Jugo-Slavs in the right way by keeping Fiume Italian, as it has been for two thousand years.

This means that British ships of the Cunard and other lines will not be able to monopolize the big steerage traffic pouring through Fiume. That is sad for the Cunard, but why give Italian shipping a chance?

Greatest transformation, excepting one, in all history, is the Poet D'Annunzio, who suddenly gives up writing unpleasant books about women he has known, and by sheer power of genius holds for his nation territory rightfully belonging to Italy.

The other famous Italian transformation was Lucullus, who reversed the D'Annunzio program. At first he was a great Roman fighter, greater, perhaps, than Caesar, who envied him and imitated him. Then he suddenly dropped glory and power and took to the high living, by which alone he is remembered. Read about him in Terrence five volumes. You will like the Greek girl that made Lucullus rebuild Greek cities.

Anthony Fokker, Hollander, who manufactured the best airplanes used in the war, predicts a trip to Europe, across the ocean, in one day. This is laughed at now. It will be laughed at again one hundred years from now when people will cross the ocean in three hours and wonder how a one-day crossing could ever seem remarkable.

SON ACCUSES HIS FATHER OF KILLING MISSING WOMAN

3 CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH

Lowell Boy and Two Girls Left Alone Trapped by Flames

Lowell, Nov. 12.—Three little children were burned to death in their beds in a fire on Brooks street early today.

While the little ones were trapped in the burning building alone, the mother was returning from a dance and the father had left the house to escort her home.

The children who are dead are Charles, aged eight, Rebecca, aged five and Catherine, aged three, children of Mr. and Mrs. George Demeiou of No. 42 Brooks street.

Several hours after the fire no trace of the little bodies had been found.

The mother of the children spent the evening at a ball given at Associate Hall. The father remained at home to look after the children. Just after midnight he left the house and went to the hall to accompany the mother home. While the couple were away from the house the fire started from an unknown cause. When they returned home they found the house afire and the three little ones somewhere in the maze of flames.

The fire spread rapidly after it started and cut off the stairways and hall in the upper part of the house, where the children were sleeping. The house was in flames when firemen arrived and it was impossible to attempt rescue. The house was practically a complete loss.

The total number of cases tried rose from 10,864 last year to 11,085 this year. There were four murder cases against one last year, 24 robbery cases against 9 in 1919, and 3,714 violations of the motor vehicle law as against 1,766 last year.

CARPET MILLS CLOSE; 1,200 OUT FOR A WEEK

Worcester, Nov. 12—The South Worcester Carpet Mills of the M. J. Whittall Associates shut down today for a week. Sweeney is a member of the marine and is alleged to have deserted from Boston. Thomas escaped from the reformatory at Shirley, Mass., last week by assaulting a guard.

TEXAS GALE KEEPS HARDING ON SHORE

Point Isabel, Tex., Nov. 12.—A Texas "norther" blew the vacation plans of President-elect Harding ashore today. The 45-mile gale which blew in from Laguna Madre ruined tarpon fishing for the President-elect and made his thoughts turn to his old sport, golf.

RAIL RATES MAY GO HIGHER

More Revenue or Advance in New England Is the Demand of Roads

New England railroad heads now in Washington conferring with the Interstate Commerce Commission will probably ask for an increase in freight and passenger rates if they are not successful in securing a greater share of the joint through rates with Eastern roads.

This announcement was made today by Edgar J. Rich, counsel of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, on his return from the Washington conference. It has been suggested that freight rates be boosted 25 per cent. and passenger rates to four cents a mile.

Mr. Rich declared that New England shippers would agree to an increase in rates if they thought that they were needed to give proper service, but he said he was doubtful whether an increase in rates would solve the solution.

FEAR LOSS OF TRAFFIC.

"I believe that any increase in freight rates," he said, "would result in a big falling off in traffic, and the net result would be no better for the roads. The strain on New England manufacturers has now reached the point where any further increase in rates will result in less traffic.

"Shippers agree with the roads here that they should have a greater share of the through rates. That would be the solution of the problem, but naturally connecting roads are not in favor of handing over their stockholders' money to New England roads.

"New England is in reality nothing more than a vast freight yard, making much switching of freight necessary at great cost. The main profit lies in the through traffic; that is, goods shipped out of the district or received from other sections. Our

Hammond Gives $200 to Basket Fund

The largest contribution to the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund to provide free food for needy families of Greater Boston Christmas has been received from John Hays Hammond, mining expert and civic leader of Gloucester and Washington, D. C. It came in the form of a check for $200. Mr. Hammond doubled his donation of last year. The fund is now well past the $3,000 mark.

In the opinion of Mr. Hammond the need for assistance is greater this year than last and he hopes that many more who gave to the fund last year will double their donation this season. Several personal have already done this, realizing that increasing unemployment and continued high prices of necessities have brought many families to the verge of despair.

Fitchburg, Nov. 12.—Speaking before a gathering of war veterans at an Armistice Day celebration here, United States Senator David I. Walsh declared that this country has slighted its war heroes. He declared that while the government means to be generous it has been very lax in the treatment of wounded soldiers.

"I shall not feel that the government has done its full duty to our disabled and wounded veterans until it has given each one of them everything that money can buy and service can do to restore them to full health and strength," he said.

Chicago, Nov. 12.—Belief that three naval aviators in a seaplane which has been missing since Wednesday from the Great Lakes Naval Training Station have perished was gaining today as searchers failed to obtain any definite trace of the men or the plane.

Stories that have repeatedly driven back rescue ships are declared by experienced Lake Michigan seamen to be more violent that any seaplane could ride through with safety.

The missing aviators are Ensign Edwin M. Clarke of Peoria, Ill., Machinist Harry C. Barr, Lake Forest, Ill., and Chief Printer Frank J. Caesar of Hollywood, Ill.

By International News Service.

Washington, Nov. 12.—The American commission on Ireland, which will hold public hearings to hear evidence regarding th Irish situation, received today a cablegram from Mrs. Muriel MacSwiney, widow of Lord Mayor of Cork, stating that she would appear to testify.

The cable declared that the state of her health would prevent her being present when the committee hearings open Nov. 16, but that she intended to appear before the investigation was completed.

BODY SOUGHT IN OLD WELL

Langdon, N. H., Nov. 12.—As a result of the accusation by fifteen-year-old John Whitney that his father, William B. Whitney, former town official, murdered his stepmother four years ago, the authorities today dug up a filled-in well on the Whitney farm.

This action was taken following the disappearance of Whitney, whose real name was said to be Arthur C. Doolittle, leaving behind a trail of alleged embezzlements and forgerics estimated at $12,000 or $13,000.

The boy testified before the Grand Jury at Newport, N. H., where he was taken with his father's housekeeper last Tuesday by High Sheriff Albert Barton of Sullivan county.

Mrs. Whitney, who was the second wife of the missing man, disappeared from their home on the night of June 30, 1916. According to Chief Corbin of Charlestown, N. H., she told neighbors she was going to visit her brother, who was in the insurance business in West Jefferson, Ohio.

INVESTIGATION BY CORBIN.

The woman failed to arrive there, however, and her Ohio relatives notified the police. They in turn communicated with Chief Corbin, in 1917, with the result that he made an investigation, reporting all the facts of the case to Henry M. Richardson who was then county solicitor. Richardson in turn presented the facts to James P. Tuttle of Manchester, former attorney general, who apparently took no further action.

Whitney, who moved here eight years ago, had become prominent in town affairs and held many positions, among them being selectman, member of the School Board and road agent. He was also a regular church

FRANCE TO BAR OUT GERMANS

Orders Withdrawal From League Meeting If Teutons Are Admitted as Members

By International News Service.

Paris, Nov. 12.—The French foreign office has instructed the French delegate to withdraw from the League of Nations meeting at Geneva immediately if steps are taken for the admission of Germany into the league. It was revealed today by "Partinax," the political editor of the Echo de Paris.

According to "Partinax," Great Britain has agreed not to support Germany's request for admission to the league. The opinion is held that if Austria is admitted it probably would widen the breach between that country and Germany, perhaps defeating the proposal for a merger of the two nations.

It is believed a special commission will be appointed by the League of Nations to examine the request of Germany and Austria for admission and will report at a future meeting.

The league meeting will open on Monday.

Lew Rosenbaum of Brookline has been petitioned into bankruptcy by three creditors having claims aggregating $12,000. Though he is treasurer of the Avon Cloak & Suit Company, No. 416 Washington street, that concern is not mentioned in the petition filed in United States District Court of Bankruptcy. attendant and liberal supporter of the inn.

On October 30 he was said to have visited Hollows Falls, Vt., purchasing a suit of clothes at the store of Goodnow, Jewett & Bishop, for which he paid with a check on the Hollows Falls National Bank in which it was later discovered he had no funds. The man who also reported to have had his mustache removed and his hair dyed and was said to have purchased and put on tortoise shell glasses. He then dropped out of sight.

DISAPPEARS WITH $5,000.

No action was taken until the son, John, employed at a local factory in Walpole, began telling stories, which resulted in his being summoned before the Grafd Jury. An investigation was then started which revealed the fact that Whitney, on his departure, had approximately $5,000 in cash on his person.

It was learned that during the summer he had obtained $2,100 from a bank, giving a mortgage on his farm in Langdon. It was also found that an order for his services as road agent had been raised from $238 and presented to Town Treasurer Walter H. Smith, who paid it. The town, however, is protected by Hubert A. and George A. Holmes, bond agents, who had a bond for $500.

In addition to being a farmer, Whitney conducted a mill at Acworth, and it was learned that he drew $1,000 or more from the Charlestown bank for a two weeks' period, but failed to pay for men. Since the man's disappearance numerous creditors have started bankruptcy proceedings. Included in these are his housekeeper and her low sons.

STORY TOLD BY BOY.

The boy says it is said was to the effect that on the night of June 30, 1916, he went to bed in a room over the kitchen. When his father and mother reached home they became involved in an argument and the boy alleged the man struck his stepmother on the head with a stick of wood, killing her. The body was kept in the barn under the hay for two or three days, and then thrown into the well, which was filled with stones, according to the story.

In addition to the boy, a number of town officials testified, and it was said that the investigation brought out the fact that Whitney was really Arthur C. Doolittle of Madison, Me. It was charged that he was forced to flee that town because of a forged check, and that he went to Montana, moving from there to Langdon.

MORE MONEY OR HIGHER RATES

roads deserve a greater share of those rates.

"However, if the New England roads are not given a larger share, I believe they will ask for higher freight and passenger rates. They say that the increases in rates recently granted are not adequate."

MILLIONS SHORT.

Officials of the New England railroads are telling the Interstate Commerce Commission that the 40 per cent. increase in freight rates and 20 per cent. advance in passenger fares have fallen short of the needed revenue. They are contending that on the recent basis of operating costs they would fall $56,000,000 short of the $600,000,000 which is to maintain property investment.

That any attempt to increase rates will meet with a strong opposition from shippers and the riding public is indicated by resolutions passed recently by the National Industrial Traffic League, representing shippers all over the country.

The league contends that the recent increases granted should be given a fair trial before changing them. It charges the railroads with taking the maximum allowance in rates on certain commodities by moving them up in classification. The organization went on record as protesting against any further increase in rates, either through classification changes, cancellation of commodity rates or exceptions to the classification.

ACCUSES RAILWAYS.

After declaring that the railroads were expected to adjust inequalities in rates, etc., the league declares in its resolutions that "there is no real inclination or desire on the part of the railriers to iron out these discrepancies, but, on the contrary, there appears to be a well-defined plan to secure further and unauthorized increases in revenue, thereby placing additional burdens upon the shippers and commerce of the country."

The resolutions declare that the carriers, "in their desire for more revenue, are alienating, to a large degree, the friendly attitude of the shipping public and creating in its place a feeling akin to hostility towards and distrust of the motives of the carriers which is already manifesting itself among even the most conservative shippers."

FIGHT STARTED ON WOODS WILL

Cousins Charge Young Woman Used Undue Influence on Middle-Aged Business Man

A legal fight to break the will of the late Arthur Lawrence Woods, well-to-do Boston wool man, has been launched by his two cousins, the Misses Ethel Baker and Gertrude Rockford of Sherborn, who charge in a petition to the Superior Court, Miss Undine Wilson, an attractive Back Bay young woman, with "using undue influence."

Further they declare that similar influence was exerted by Charles H. Stebbins, Boston and Cambridge lawyer, named as executor of the dead man's estate.

Woods died October 24 at Arlington. His two cousins were the only relatives present at the burial. The other attendants were business associates and several young women friends.

Miss Wilson occupies an apartment in No. 833 Beacon street. She refused to be interviewed and to explain the will under which she obtains the bulk of the Woods estate.

Mr. Woods, who was 52 years old when he died, never married. He was living at the time of his death at the Harvard Club, and for more than a year has been seen considerably in the company of Miss Wilson, a young woman less than 30.

In the will Miss Wilson is referred to as "a friend." A clause in the instrument suggests that "she take care of me and that she be generously compensated for so doing." The funeral arrangements were carried out by the A. L. Eastman Co., undertakers, whose offices on Beacon street, are directly opposite Miss Wilson's home.

Alfred McCleary of Maryland, a law partner of Attorney Stebbins, has filed appearance for the will. He states that he is unable to enumerate Woods' personal effects which, according to the will, are in Miss Wilson's apartments.

Neither of Mr. Woods' cousins claim to know the beneficiary.

NOW, YOU FLIRTS, LOOK OUT FOR BOSTON'S WOMEN POLICEMEN

BEWARE OF GIRL WHO SMILES, SHE MAY WEAR BADGE

Don't think because she smiles that she is naughty—the chances are she's one of "Boston's Best."

Don't make love to any girl that's willing—it may be the "long arm of the law" that embraces you.

Don't squeeze the arm of the girl who sits next to you in the theatre—she may "pinch" you on the other also.

Don't ask her if she's lonesome, and tell her that you're blue—save your breath and tell it to the Judge in the mornin'.

Don't depend upon the night to protect you—she may be equipped with an automatic searchlight and a badge.

Don't tell her you know where there's a quart and many of them—the girl that comes behind you may be thinking of your still.

Don't do it, my boy—don't do anything.

In the good old days, every little girl under seventeen was tucked safely away at sundown, and nursie would tell how "the golly-wogs will get you if you don't watch out."

Now, with eight stalwart women to be appointed on the Boston police force, any little girl under seventeen who ventures forth after dark will be warned by their mothers that "the lady cops will get you if you don't watch out!"

Women police? Why, yes, why not? We have women lawyers, women politicians and women sheriffs. Why not women police?

At last Boston has awakened—awakened to the dangers of the dance hall and the common!

Sometime between now and February 1st, eight women will be appointed to special duty on the Boston police force. At that time they will go forth in the name of the law, to clean up the city and to protect the morals of girlhood.

CONSIDERED A LONG TIME.

This decision has come after a year and a half of careful consideration on the part of city officials.

"But why women?" one asks, "Why not more men if the present force cannot handle the situation? Where are the probation officers and the social service workers?"

In the first place, the responsibility is proving too great for the probation officer whose duties occupy all of her time with court matters, leaving her little for outside work.

Social service workers have struggled with the ever increasing problem of girl-welfare until they admit the situation is getting beyond them. Furthermore, the hands of the social service worker are tied by the limit of her authority. Such authority, vested in the hands of women police, will do much to bring certain wayward girls and unscrupulous youths to terms, it is hoped by officials.

LYNN HAS TWO.

Lynn, our nearest neighbor, has two policewomen who have accomplished remarkable work among the women in that city. Mrs. Anna Mangan, the first woman appointed on the Lynn police force, reports that with the assistance of Mrs. Harriet Pierce, also a patrolwoman, she has been able to dispose of more than 1,000 cases with-in the year, thus relieving the departments of that responsibility.

Deputy Chief Callahan of the Lynn force said:

"I find women on the force indispensable. I could not do without the services of these women now."

Such cities as Lowell, Haverhill, Worcester and Springfield report that women are proving great value in patrol work on the various forces.

Some people will imagine that the new policewomen will don regulation uniforms, carry an automatic and a "billy" and patrol the beat as the men do. Such, however, will not be the case, if Boston follows the example of other cities.

SEARCHLIGHT NEEDED.

A searchlight and a badge of authority constitute the equipment of women police in other cities, and will doubtless be adopted as regulation here.

It is the duty of the policewomen to visit places of amusement, such as dance halls, theatres and summer resorts, and see that proper conduct is maintained.

The State law that all children under five years of age will be excluded from theatres, and that all girls under seventeen shall not be permitted to attend public dances unescorted by an elder relative, will be strictly enforced.

Whereas many cities have but two patrol women, Boston will have eight. This number is considered necessary here as Boston has special difficulties.

WILL PATROL COMMON.

Boston Common will receive particular attention. Social service workers report that conditions there are worse than in any other part of the city.

Miss Mary J. Driscoll, head of the United States Hygiene Board, has been in control of girl welfare work in this city for several years, and knows the situation better than any other woman in the country.

"It is pitiful to note," she said, "that many of the girls who go to the Common to flirt, are mere children, simply in search of natural comradeship. It is with these girls that the greatest need for service is apparent. Many of the girls are not naturally bad, but come to the Common in search of a husband. The sailors who put into port here from all parts of the world flock to the Common, knowing that here they can find what they seek.

"I believe that properly chosen women, vested with authority to act, can do wonderful work in rescuing these children before they have taken the irredeemable step."

MAYOR ENDORSES IT.

Mayor Peters, who has always taken a personal interest in sociological problems, is greatly in favor of women police in Boston.

"We wish preventive protection," said the Mayor, "and we have come to the conclusion that refined, tactful women can accomplish better work among girls and women than the men could ever do. We do not believe that the Common is a pitfall for girls, but I do not intend that it shall be. I want to see the Common and the city a safe and proper place for girls and children to come and play in their leisure hours."

No one knows just who the chosen few of Boston's first patrol women will include. The decision rests with Police Commissioner Curtis.

Tragedy Ends Romance of Texas Borde

Harry H. Garner of Chicago and Miss Theodora Sanders of Laredo, Texas, principals in a romance of the Texas border which ended in tragedy. Refusal on the part of Garner to marry her, it is said, prompted Miss Sanders, while in Fort Dearborn Hotel, Chicago, to plunge the keen-bladed Mexican dagger, shown above, into her heart. She dropped dead at her sweetheart's feet.

GRANGERS WILL HEAR COOLIDGE

Vice-President-Elect Coolidge to Address Delegates in Mechanics Hall This Evening

Delegates to the National Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, in convention here, met in Tremont Temple today to attend a lecture by the Rev. Russell H. Conwell, D.D., of Philadelphia, who spoke on "Acres of Diamonds."

In the afternoon the seventh degree was to be conferred by officers of the Assembly of Demeter in Grand Hall, Mechanics Building, and in the evening Governor Calvin Coolidge, Vice-President-elect, was to address the Grange, together with Governor-elect Channing Cox and Mayor Peters.

TO CONDEMN LABOR.

The Grange, it is stated, will, before the convention ends, take action on resolutions condemning the attitude of organized labor generally, particularly in regard to calling of unauthorized strikes.

It is said to be the belief of many Grangers that the inefficiency of many laboring men today is due, in no small part, to the workings of labor unions and their walking delegates.

As a result of the strike of pressmen in Springfield, at the plant where the Granger magazine was being published, it had to go to press with two pages blank. Resolutions were adopted directing the board of managers to print a full statement of the facts in the next issue of the publication.

HAVE HARBOR SAIL.

Upwards of 300 Grangers took a thirty-mile trip around Boston harbor on the steamer Monitor. A courtesy extended by Mayor Peters and Penal Institutions Commissioner Thomas C. O'Brien. The visitors were shown Deer Island Prison, all the islands and forts in the harbor and were taken out beyond Boston light to have a look at the ocean itself.

Maybe Police Music Will Cure Evildoers

Quincy Market pricked up its ears today.

From out the second story there came the blare of horns, the boom o a bas tuba and the shrill call of fife and other instruments.

Unseemly sounds; for on the door leading to the second story is marked "Boston Police Department, Traffic Squad."

The Boston market district is not easily taken by surprise. For half a century or more, Faneuil Hall has been haunted the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Armory, from which, in time past, the sound of trumpet and merriment has awakened the echoes of the ancient market environs.

But today there was some stampede when, just after noon, there came the blasts from out the police quarters.

"Who picked the band?" asked a white-clothed marketman.

Then the noise came in gasps, groups, individually and in concert.

DRY BANDWAGON? NO

"Can't be the bandwagon of the Prohibition Party," remarked a bystander, who declared he knew sober band music when he heard it.

Just then Clarence Hyde, clerk of the Traffic Squad, appeared.

"What's up?" asked Quincy Market in near unison.

"That?" replied Hyde, "why, that's the new Traffic Squad band. Just forming. First drill hour." And the secret was out.

"No use trying to keep anything quiet around here," said Hyde.

"Traffic Officer Joseph Sullivan, who stands down by the North Station and who can play any instrument, afloat or ashore, is the leader.

"The boys thought it about time the Police Department had a band of its own, likewise an orchestra.

"It is a stimulant to our social life and the commissioner we learned would not be averse to our forming a band. So we got together. There are thirty-eight coming in to play for a starter. By the time we are fully organized we expect to have about eighty pieces. Those who do not know how to play will be taught. Sullivan and myself will give lessons and we are going to get some outside assistance from the Symphony Orchestra."

SOME REAL TALENT.

Lieutenant Bernard J. Hoope, in charge of the Traffic Squad, and one of the leading band "fans" of the Police Department, has, it is whispered about, secured some of the best symphony men to help construct the musical branch of the Police Department.

Our first public appearance will be when we serenade the commissioner," said Hyde.

Drums—Humbert Albano, James B. Connolly, James J. Dunn, George E. Fallan. Cymbals—James Collins. Saxophones—Harry Benn, Willard Eide, Patrick Hannon and George Foster. Clarinets—Norman Cross, Warren Liese, Patrick Connannon, Side trombones—James J. Durkin, Thomas Leary, Irving Hoyt and Michael Kilgallon. Flte—John Gilmore. Altos—Grady Logan, Jeremiah Ryan and Earl Colby. French horns—Clarence Hyde; E flat bass, William F. Kelly; B bass, Frank Dolloff and Theodore Miller. Baritones—Edward Lawless and Albert Sweet. Pianos—

And more are being added.

TEAM LEADERS CHOSEN FOR HOLY CROSS DRIVE

Bottomley will increase the total to more than $35,000, and the metropolitan Boston quests of $50,000 will have been subscribed some days before the close of the campaign on November 28.

PASS HOME RULE IN COMMONS

Impossible to Give Up Strategic Control of Irish Harbors, Says Lloyd George

By Universal Service.

London, Nov. 12—"I implore Ireland to remain within the empire which she has helped to build and adorn." This was Lloyd George's appeal to the Sinn Fein in the House of Commons during the debate on the third reading of the home rule bill, prior to the transfer of the measure to the House of Lords.

The bill passed the House of Commons after a motion for rejection of the measure proposed by William C. Adamson, the opposition leader, had been defeated by a 132 to 85.

The Premier repeated that there are three immovable conditions which must be conceded by Ireland. These, he declared, were that Ireland should not become an independent sovereign State, that she should not weaken the strategic security of the United Kingdom by depriving England of the complete control of Irish harbors and that Ulster should not be coerced.

CONDEMNED BY PRESS

Many newspaper men united today in condemning the Home Rule bill. "Premier Lloyd George disentombed his love with such notorious persistency that his professions of good-will carry no more weight than a Russian ruble, and now he offers a piece of legislation impudent in its futility," said the Daily News, owned by Lord Northcliffe. The newspaper added: "Nobody believes that the measure will work out, and nobody wants it."

"The bill is not wanted in any quarter," said the Morning Post. "It is not a workable or tenable position between union of the Empire and separation by Ireland. It is an experiment."

FROM CARDINAL BOURNE

The Times, in addition to its comment, printed a statement by Cardinal Bourne, revealing that in 1910 he urged the Duke of Norfolk to support the widest self-government for Ireland, Wales and Scotland. He said he was convinced the majority of the people would accept self-government for Ireland, Wales and Scotland if there were provided for the maintenance of the crown and safeguards for the essential defence of the empire. The Cardinal, furthermore, expressed the belief that most Englishmen view the maintenance of vast numbers of troops in Ireland as a shame, and desire their withdrawal. Looking at the matter pointed out, that evidently a secret oath bound the society that was using assassination in its campaign.

"I am assured that the Sinn Fein disclaims all connection with the secret oath that the Sinn Fein leaders deplore and disavow its aims and methods," the Cardinal said.

"But at the present time the Sinn Feiners are unable to control the murderers."

ARCHBISHOP OF TUAM.

The Archbishop of Tuam was quoted as saying the Black and Tan police had initiated a reign of frightfulness in the region of Thurles, adding: "If servants of the crown refuse to reciprocate the peoples' longing for peace it would be possible to establish peace at home. But the first move must come from the government."

The Times supported the contention and charged the government with engaging in an effort to scourge Ireland into obedience. The Archbishop of Tuam is more likely to be better informed on Irish matters than any member of the Cabinet, the Times said.

"Former Premier Asquith urged only yesterday a new appeal to effort be made towards peace," continued the Times. "We hope that his counsel would not be spoken in vain. The only other alternative is for the government to outrun the tolerance of the British people."

Mystery in Death by X-Ray Machine

Newark, N. J., Nov. 12.—Coroner George L. Warren and physicians attending the autopsy over Customer Ing, manager of a Roseville hotel, are puzzled to know how Ing had formed a contact with an X-ray apparatus which caused his death in the office of Dr. Charles F. Baker.

It is believed that Ing's body came in contact with the steel arm from which the X-ray bulb was suspended, sending eighteen milliamperes of electricity through his heart.

Examination of the body revealed a slight burn below the heart and a slight scratch on a sweater worn by the dead man.

Coroner Warner has announced that Dr. William Mining Hamilton was making the autopsy discovered Ing's heart had been weak, but that death had not been due to that.

Miss Henrietta MacKintosh, youngest daughter of a wealthy Holyoke manufacturer, eloped with Lewis F. Horne, a Boston salesman, wired the said news to pops and today the young couple are anxiously awaiting the paternal blessing.

The wedding took place in New York only a few hours after the ceremony Mr. Horne was compelled to leave his bride there and return to Boston on urgent business matters.

"Yes, we're married," the smiling bridegroom told friends today at his office, suite 306, No. 10 High street. "Dates have not completed all their plans for the future," he said. "Those things will be arranged when Mr. Horne returns to New York tonight. Upon their return to Boston they will reside at No. 415 Commonwealth avenue, where I have my bachelor apartments.

The wedding date was or added import to the young bridegroom as it fell on Armistice Day. He served in the 11th infantry of the Fifth Division during the war and on the first Armistice day was "gassing through the Argonne Forest.

The bride is a graduate of the Holyoke High School and attended the Capon School at Northampton and Smith College. She has been active in social affairs in her home city and Springfield. ROW OVER CHILD LED TO MURDER

Berkshire Couple, in Double Tragedy, Were Fighting for Daughter's Custody

Pittsfield, Nov. 12. — In a serious condition at the home of Mrs. Edward Webster in Dalton, five miles from here, is Louise Piroguff, the two-year-old child, who was rendered an orphan today when her father, aged forty, shot her mother, Tina Piroguff, aged twenty, in New York, and then turned the gun on himself ending his life. He was largely to be a contest over the custody of the little girl that the tragedy occurred.

Mr. and Mrs. Piroguff came to Hinsdale from Montreal, Canada, less than a year ago. They purchased a farm in Hinsdale. During the Summer Piroguff's mental trouble assumed his wife of being too attentive to a man in New Yorker, who was boarding in Hinsdale. In the middle of August, Mrs. Piroguff left the farm and went to the home of her mother, Mrs. Annie Marcshintorf, No. 141 East Fourth street, New York, where she decided to bring suit for divorce. Upon separating she left Louise with the father and the child was later placed in charge over to Miss Lucy P. Friday, district agent of the Massachusetts Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

Piroguff became lonely for his child and went to New York to see her and pleaded with Mrs. Piroguff to come home. She refused.

He returned to the homestead and continued to brood over the fact he was not allowed on a farm in a lonely section of Hinsdale.

On September 27, last, Mrs. Piroguff through her attorneys, James Fallon and E. T. Connolly, started proceedings in the Probate Court here for custody of the child. She stated in the petition she was apart from her husband for justifiable cause. Her husband signified his intention to fight for the child and retained as attorney George A. Fredrickson of Pittsfield. The case was scheduled in the Probate Court by Judge Kingsley Kinsley latter part of this month. In the meantime the child had been acting as guardian of the divorced pair and had placed her in charge of Mrs. Webster in Dalton.

Attorney Fredrickson, counsel for Piroguff when seen by the Associated American reporter of the tragedy remarked:

"I am greatly surprised to hear that Piroguff has killed his wife. He was much devoted to her and was enchanted with his baby. I feel for him."

His wife was attached to his daughter and brooded over the fact that his wife and child were away from him."

LUMBER MILLS MAY CLOSE

4,000 Employes Will Be Affected, Say Owners, Unless Prices Are Raised

Manchester, N. H., Nov. 12.—More than 4,000 employes are facing possible complete shut down of the lumber mills throughout the State this Winter, according to statements given out at a meeting of lumber manufacturers of the State held at the Derryfield Club here.

The dealers claim that they must either increase the price of lumber or shut down, declaring that the operation expenses of the mills are 300 per cent. higher than before the war while the selling price of lumber has fallen off 50 per cent.

Skilled men in the mills receive from $6 to $20 a day. Mill owners also claim that while prices for finished products have fallen off the price of stumpage is $10 per thousand. The operating cost before the war was $6 per thousand. It is now $17, they claim.

3 ARRESTED IN GUN FIGHT

Two Men and 23-Year-Old Girl Held While Police Seek Occupants of Auto

A dozen or more shots were exchanged in a gun fight between two men in a house on Spring street, West End, early today.

James Natile and Joseph Costa, alleged combatants, and Marie Russo, pretty twenty-three-year-old Italian girl, were arrested for complicity in the shooting. The police are seeking companions of Costa, who escaped in an automobile.

The Russo girl was found unconscious on the third floor of the house at No. 46 Spring street, where she had fainted after the shooting started. When she recovered she refused to give her address or to tell her part in the affair. She was given medical attention.

WENT TO "GET EVEN."

According to the police, Costa claims he went to the Spring street house to "get even" with men he alleges relieved him of $100 about a week ago. When he arrived at the house in an automobile in company with several others, the Russo girl, another man companion and Costa tried to enter an apartment on the third floor where Natile is said to live.

Natile opened the door several inches and the police claim Costa opened fire. Shots were exchanged between the men, a dozen or more being fired before Costa made his escape from the building. The shots drew the attention of the police and those in the automobile sped away when the officers were seen running down the street.

COSTA ARRESTED LATER.

Sergeant Wallace arrested Costa on Cambridge street a few hours after the shooting and recovered a revolver 15 the street a few feet from where he was standing at the time of the arrest.

Natile was arrested in the Spring street house. An automatic revolver found in the house by Sergeant Sheehan is claimed by the police to belong to him.

The police are now searching for Costa's companions, who made their escape in the automobile.

$51,988 WAS SPENT IN A. F. OF L. CAMPAIGN

Washington, Nov. 12.—The American Federation of Labor today filed with the clerk of the House of Representatives its report of election campaign receipts and expenditures, showing receipts from February 24 to November 2 of $53,174.10, expenditures of $51,988.25 and remaining in the treasury $1,185.85. The report shows that about two-thirds of this sum was expended for printing and the remainder largely for office expenses and salaries.

Hoboes Only Mentally Ill; "Treat 'Em"

Have you a "knocker" in your office? Send for the doctor.

Does the panhandling hobo bother you? Treat him by the psychiatric methods advocated by Dr. Henry R. Stedman, whose new theories of handling workers are attracting much attention among the medicos and surgeons of Boston.

Dr. Stedman urges physical examinations of all applicants for jobs, and a mental examination through observation, a period of training or through special mental tests.

The grouch, the kicker, the trouble-maker and the hobo are psychiatric cases," says the doctor, advising a reasonable application of that science to all industries.

FRIENDS OF IRELAND PROTEST BRITISH PROPAGANDA IN U. S.

'WAKE UP, AMERICA,' SLOGAN OF NATIONAL APPEAL

Instancing among other things, the comparatively recent declaration of the Rev. Charles A. Eaton at Providence town that immigrants of English stock are "an ignorant peasant mob gathered from the purlieus of Europe," the Friends of Irish Freedom have issued from national headquarters in Washington a four-page "warning" to Americans that British propaganda is being carried on in this country with the aim of establishing a popular belief that the United States "would have been better off if they had remained under British control—with the imputation that return to British control is better late than ever."

The Rev. Dr. Eaton, whose remarks are quoted, is described by the leaflet as an unassimilated Briton of provincial birth. Dr. Eaton was born in Nova Scotia fifty-two years ago. He is connected with a New York weekly.

WAKE UP SLOGAN.

The "Friends of Irish Freedom publication" is headed "Americans! Wake Up!" It begins with three declarations, as follows:

1—The ideals and characters of national heroes of Revolutionary days are being attacked and undermined.

2—Our history is being distorted and polluted and our children thereby demoralized.

3—The achievements of many different races—Irish, German, Italian, French, Scandinavian, Slavic, Polish, Spanish, etc.—in founding, developing and maintaining the institutions of this country, are treated with contempt to the glory of England, the age-long, implacable foe of America.

"BE ON GUARD."

The call to true Americans to be on guard against this alleged propaganda, in the press, in the school, in motion pictures and elsewhere reads:

"The sons of Irish blood in the United States were almost the first to look behind the altruistic pretence of self-determination, the rights of small peoples, and making the world safe for democracy, used in the sinister interest purposes of the powers controlling the peace negotiations, and to call public attention to the fact that acceptance of the proposed League of Nations would submerge American liberties and reduce the United States to a position of dependency as a subsidiary of the British Empire, the inevitable consequences of which would be an America enslaved not only in its political rights but in the right to produce and to trade.

"Instead of the happy, prosperous and attractive nation the United States has grown to be during more than fourteen decades, it would, under this drag, become a dependent, unhappy and degenerate country, where the masses of the people would suffer from periodic unemployment and its attendant evils—staggering under the great burdens of taxes imposed on them by war burdens and weakened and handicapped in a constant struggle for national survival.

"The initial skirmish which ended with the defeat of the Wilson program by the United States Senate repulsed but by no means defeated the enemies of free government as established by Washington and his associates. This campaign to deprive the United States of its freedom is being renewed with added vigor and new resources.

LEAGUE FORESEEN.

"Despite the open display of avarice, selfishness, chicanery, low cunning and contemptuous cynicism shown in the demands for territorial extension, extended spheres of influence, and unrestrained trade control, which have been manifested in every step of the negotiations, the effort is again being made to force the United States into partnership in this game for the richest stakes in the history of civilization—to wit: Overlordship of Europe, America, India and Asia without the right to interfere in the making of policies or even the meanest satisfaction of sharing in the plunder.

"Recent disclosures regarding allied participation in the dispute between Russia and Poland illuminate the real purposes of the League. In defiance of Article 11 of the Peace Covenant war against Russia was incited, instituted and assisted. When it went contrary to the plans of the diplomatic interests in control, the aid of Article 10 was invoked to provide escape from the consequences of a war thus deliberately provoked. It is in this manner that the youth and money of the United States are expected to be used; the Russian-Polish controversy being only one of a number of similar incidents which give conclusive proof that, once in the league, America would be made the pawn of British intrigue and in the end our national liberty to work, to trade and to be free, would be lost.

"One form of British propaganda which accompanies this program has been going on for years under cover, but is now impudently in the open. Supported by interests and individuals claiming to be American, it is intended to make the present generation of school children, and the recent aliens who should be the objects of our tenderest care, ashamed of, and apologetic for, the accomplishments and events of the American Revolution. The revised history movement has already progressed so far that a percentage of the text-books actually in the public schools have been changed to show that the struggle of the Colonies for Independence was only a casual event. The essential complaints of the colonists, enumerated in the Declaration of Independence, are ignored; the Colonies are instructed to have been in the wrong. The implication is carried that America would have been better off if it had remained under British control. With the imputation that return to British control is better late than never.

"With a contempt for consistency, statues are being erected in London to American patriots who, if they had come into British clutches from 1776 to 1782, would have paid the penalty of their patriotism with their lives. As a matter of fact, every one of these patriots died with the reckless personal slanders of England still being openly made against them. The gravity of the matter is that this hypocritical attempt to honor our American patriots is not the sole ground that what they did was not American at all, but English. In the Prince of Wales' address of The London Times, this year, the statement is made that this country (the United States) has never been at war with England.

"This text-book perversion is not a future evil to be feared; it is already well under way. It is openly accepted and approved by a section of the private schools, including educators connected with the public schools are defending it, while others are its innocent victims. The historians concerned even have a special organization. The great bulk of school-book publishers are constantly putting out new books, to replace those now in the schools, from which they presumably profit. Unless this movement is checked, it may be certainly that the growth generation of American school children will be taught that it was wrong for this country to have become a free nation, and the real end in view—to pave the way for a population that will be willing to accept for the United States a subservient national position in a 'Commonwealth of the World,' with Great Britain as the controlling power—will be consummated.

"The revised school text-books are only a part of the program. In 'The London Times,' weekly edition, of August 26, less than a month ago, the statement is made that the 'educational movement to increase and cement the friendship between the countries' is 'making great strides in America.' The Times states that in one department of propaganda alone —that of motion pictures—in the United States at present, some 20,000 schools and churches are now exhibiting these educational films.' Contempt for American public opinion cannot go much further than this!

PILGRIM WARNING.

"Almost a year ago the Friends of Irish Freedom called the attention of the public to preliminary announcements in the British press of an attempt to force British agencies into influence, if not control, of the celebrations on this side of the water to commemorate the three hundredth anniversary of the landing in America of the Pilgrims. This prediction appears to be more than fulfilled. The Congress of the United States and the State of Massachusetts have made appropriations for permanent testimonials. 'The Sulgrave Institute,' the English speaking Union, and other agencies of British propaganda, seem actually to have pushed themselves into control of the formal meeting called. From the Pacific Coast eastward a chain of meetings, called ostensibly to commemorate the Pilgrim Tercentenary, have repeated the falsehoods appearing in the school history text-books, and under the plausible pretence of fostering a better international feeling, are thus backing up the sophistries and falsehoods of the revised text-books.

"During the last few years, and especially since the war, from one end of the United States to the other it is generally agreed that the ever-shadowing menace to the peace and security of the United States are the great masses of unassimilated aliens, who, unless educated into better knowledge of the spirit and institutions of the nation, may, especially during the war reconstruction period, become a source of incalculable danger. It is also agreed that the first essential of Americanization obviously is to show a spirit of friendship to the alien; to teach him that the contribution to our national progress of all the various races that make up our national life is fully understood and appreciated.

TERCENTENARY USED.

"In view of the acknowledged conditions the statement in 'The London Times of July 4, 1920, that full use will be made of the splendid educational opportunity afforded by the Tercentenary' was not expected to mean that propaganda would be carried so far as to attempt to stir up racial hatred, based on justifiable resentment of racial slander, which is exactly what is being done. At the preliminary meeting in Providence town on August 29, the Rev. Charles A. Eaton, an unassimilated Briton of provincial birth, formerly pastor of the Rockefeller Church in New York, in a strong effort to prove that everything worthy in the history of the United States is due to a mythical race called the Anglo-Saxon, characterized all the immigrants coming to this country since 1820 as 'incoherent, polyglot and mongrelized,' and further, that all immigrants who are not of English stock, are 'an ignorant peasant mob, gathered from the purlieus of Europe,' both of which statements, in their refusal to admit to equality or citizenship, or to recognition or credit for their racial contribution to the nation's progress, are an undisguised effort to breed discontent, and, as an invitation to Bolshevism, come within the twilight zone of treason.

"Another speaker, Mrs. George Maynard Minor, who, for some inconceivable reason, has been chosen as the president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution (God save the mark!) at this same meeting declared that America is English and, while conceding that 'other nationalities have helped to found this country,' said they have 'become Anglicized in the end.' It is not difficult to conceive some fourth Tory expressing such a sentiment, but it seems strange coming from the mouth of the president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

"The Friends of Irish Freedom call attention to the fact that its prediction has unhappily been verified, and it now calls on all citizens of Irish racial stock to take part in searching out themselves all attacks on the history and traditions of our beloved country, and in co-operating and supporting all other citizens working to this end.

"We hold that the progress of the United States is not due to the influence or work of any special racial group, but is, in fairness, to be credited to the combined work of all the various groups that during 300 years have been contributing their best qualities into the common stock, the result being an American type of civilization. The so-called Anglo-Saxon theory is an invention created out of nothing—a mythical race that, if it ever existed, has been extinct since the Norman invasion, being given special prominence about seventy years ago, to give a reason for claiming interest for England for everything worthy done in the world by any person speaking the English language.

"More than 50 per cent. of the present population of the United State has no connection with English ancestry. The laws, traditions, customs, civilization and ideas of liberty of the United States are native to this soil. The Pilgrims came here because they could not get in England the liberty they sought. For 300 years, or until after the end of the war of 1812, they and their descendants were never free from English reprisal, for having dared to declare and maintain themselves apart from the political, religious and economic absolutism of the Stuarts. Cromwell and the Hanoverians.

ARBOR "TREACHERY."

"The Friends of Irish Freedom abhor the treachery to the United States of the coterie of Tories who are attempting to build up in the United States an Anglo-Saxon caste which, if successful, will degrade more than 80 per cent. of our population to a condition of social, political and economic inferiority.

"It resents the attempt to stir up industrial discord by depriving the great bulk of our people, especially our wage-earners, of their right to be proud of the history and achievements of the nation which offered them the right to live and to labor under conditions not to be found or possible in the lands of their birth.

U. S. FROWNS ON SOVIET DEAL

Refuses to Sanction Vanderlip Syndicate's Billion-Dollar Trade Project

Washington, Nov. 12.—The United States Government will refuse to sanction the contract by which a syndicate headed by Washington D. Vanderlip, of California, has agreed to furnish supplies valued at a $1,000,000,000 to the Soviet Government in return for oil, gold, platinum, furs and other articles of commerce, it was learned officially.

Neither will it aid the syndicate to obtain possession or to operate the 400,000 square miles of oil and Mineral lands in Siberia and Kamchatka for which concession has been obtained from Lenine.

In assuming this attitude the government is giving direct aid to England and Japan, both of which are doing their utmost to prevent American capital from obtaining a foothold in either Russia or Siberia.

By the tripartite agreement with France and Italy, Great Britain has already succeeded in excluding America from the Turkish empire and all of Asia Minor.

Japan has openly announced that she will vigorously oppose the entrance of American capital into any territory which she believes to be within her sphere of influence, except on specific permission from Tokio.

VETERANS JEER AT MAYOR

Pittsburgh Official Flees as Paraders Refuse to Pass Him in Review

Pittsburgh, Nov. 11.—The Armistice Day parade here turned into a rout—a rout for Mayor E. V. Babcock.

When the thousands of veterans of the great war reached the reviewing stand they fell out of ranks, not in order, but in spite of their former military training. They jeered and hooted the Mayor as he tried to make a speech and finally drove him from the stand.

The parade had started at about 10 o'clock and it was a little after noon when the Mayor, after vainly trying to make his voice heard to say that he was "Mayor of all the people of Pittsburgh," gave it up and fled. Wounded soldiers in automobiles are said to have started the uproar. They at least those who were able—left the autos and refused to pass the stand as long as the Mayor was in it.

Mayor Babcock had incurred the displeasure of the former soldiers by his stand in refusing to withdraw a permit for a "tag day" last Saturday ostensibly for the benefit of war sufferers in Germany, Austria and Hungary.

After Mayor Babcock left the stand the remaining cohorts marched past in orderly array, but before that all who had not joined the crowd in front of the stand were diverted into side streets.

IS MARRIAGE A SUCCESS? WHAT SOME OF OUR READERS SAY

Marriage Editor: I am only thirty years young and have been married twice. My first husband died, and with No. 2 I am very happy. He is what I call a regular fellow, a pal any girl would be proud of. He is not the cave man style (treat 'em rough and tell 'em nothing), but a kind, loving husband. He approves of paint and powder and I use them. I also wear peek-a-boo waists and short skirts. He likes to have me talk and laugh with all my male friends and is never jealous. So why shouldn't I think marriage a big success? HUSBY'S PAL.
Natick.

WED A WOUNDED SOLDIER.

Marriage Editor:
Is marriage a success? I'll say it is. I have been married two years and we have a baby girl five months old. We both love her and play with her evenings before putting her to bed. I feel like disowning the man as an American that signed himself "C. M." from Dorchester. If he believes in that Turkish stuff, why doesn't he exile himself and go where he can practice it? Most all unhappiness is caused by men like him. In my home if I am cross my husband turns it into fun and it is all over. If he is cross, I try and console him; for the wound he received in the head while serving in the Marine Corps in France, I am sure, is the cause. We agree, and subjects that come up in the American are talked over. The turtledoves at the Franklin Park Zoo have nothing on "we-uns." Every married couple can be like that if they both try at all. Of course, if you marry one like that "Turkish" American you can't expect to be happy. Who ever heard of an American wife standing up when her husband entered the room and waiting for him to tell her to kiss him? Say! I would like to see one do it. Happily married,
"YOUNG JACK."
Boston.

LET HER PONDER!

Marriage Editor: I have followed with much interest and amusement some of the letters as to whether or not marriage was a success. I think so if the right way is being followed, and is only one home and not two. In my estimation a man should have the privilege in this. The good old Book says that God created the man, and afterwards the woman to be his helpmate, not his superior. A fifty-fifty system is amounting to nothing, for what would a hand be with two leaders at one time, and a school with two teachers in one class? It would be a mess, wouldn't it? So what can a home be else, when two are trying to rule it? Our lonesome lad is talking about paint and powder, —why, my dear boy, it isn't the face but the heart and character of the girl you want to notice. I do not recommend any painting or powdering. Indeed I dislike it very much; but if a girlie thinks that she can beautify herself by doing so, let her.
C. G. YOUNG.

"NINETEEN" IS WAITING.

Marriage Editor: I think Lynn Twenty-seven is rather a pessimistic person in saying that there aren't any good girls around nowadays, one that would make a good wife. I think it is just the opposite. I can not seem to find any real good boys. Am nineteen years old, and holding a very good position, have been through college, as Twenty-seven says, and have mixed with all kinds of boys, but none have I met that would make a good husband. Nevertheless I am patient and will no doubt find one sooner or later that will appeal to me. But just at this moment I am just as much against boys as Twenty-seven is against girls.

As for marriage being a success, I am sure it is, as I judge by my own home. I don't think I have ever heard a harsh word between my father and mother and am sure it's because they both started out in life together, working together, and asking each other's opinion on everything. Tell me, Lynn Twenty-seven, if you change your mind.
CITY POINT NINETEEN.

FROM CAMP DEVENS.

Marriage Editor: I am like the girl who wants no substitutes. I am looking for my ideal, like the girl who knows there are fellows who regard a woman as holy and sacred. I like the way D. M. O. expresses her opinion and I am sure she is the right kind of woman to make a good man a happy home and a cheerful life.
C. A.
Camp Devens.

WORD FROM CLEVELAND.

Marriage Editor:
Answer to wife of jealous and fault-finding husband. I also am a young married woman. I am very happy and have a good, kind and lovable husband. He cannot do enough for me and always wants to see me happy. Now, if I had my way of husband I would go out anyway if I felt like going. As for loving and kissing, he doesn't deserve them. What he does deserve is a good beating. I don't see how you can live—it would break my heart. I would not try to please and do so much for him. Let him help himself and let him think you don't care, even if you do.
Cleveland, O. JOELLA.

MARRIED A MARINE.

Marriage Editor:
Is marriage a success? I will say it is if a girl gets the right man. But I was one of those foolish girls whose heads were turned by a uniform, and so against my parents' wishes I married a U. S. marine.

Oh, how I wish I had never met him! I was happy for a short time, but I soon found out that he was untrue to me, and that I had made a mistake like lots of other girls I know. So there was only one thing I could do, and that was divorce him, which I did. I am now married to a man who works in a shop, and I will say that marriage is a success if you get the right mate.
ONCE A FOOLISH GIRL.

This Husband Loves Paint and Powder

Marriage Editor: After reading the article by "An Old Maid" I find I side with her. Before I was married I did not use paint or powder. Upon my wedding day I was requested to by my bridesmaid, though it was quite unnecessary.

My husband approved of it, and now, whether I go outside of my own home or not, if I do not have any on I am sure to hear of it after his eyes have had a glance at my face. Therefore, like the "Old Maid," I say, are the girls altogether to blame for using powder and paint? I am but seventeen and do not need it.
A YOUNG WIFE.

GRIFFITH COMING TO "LOVE FLOWER" PREMIER

Boston is to have two Griffith productions running simultaneously. At Tremont Temple his "Way Down East" is now nearing its 100th performance, while at the Park Theatre, on next Monday evening, his latest little picture, "The Love Flower," will have its Boston premier.

So careful is Mr. Griffith that there shall be no misdirection of his newest work, he is coming over to Boston to see to it that the premier of "The Love Flower" be everything desired, since Boston has accorded him such a great welcome already. Mr. Griffith will bring along with him his latest artist and show to Boston the beautiful Miss Carol Dempster.

It is the fashion of Mr. Griffith to develop his own artists, and in Miss Dempster he thinks he has another unusual performer for the cinema art. The hero of the work is also the hero of "Way Down East"—Richard Barthelmess.

The story of "The Love Flower" is based upon the theme of what women dare for love. To what ends they will go for love and the great sacrifices they will make for love is tensely and tellingly told in "The Love Flower," whose locale is set in the tropical seas on a tropical island far removed from the civilized habitats of man.

100 P. C. in 3 Years if New Gas Price Goes

If the local gas company is successful with its petition the price of gas in Boston will be increased for the third time in the present year. It is not unlikely that a new price at this time would mark a 100 per cent. jump within a period of three years.

For the twelve-year period up to 1918, gas was sold in Boston for 80 cents per 1,000 cubic feet. Today's price is $1.35. The upward trend of the "standard" price is shown in this table:

1906 to 1918	$ .80
January 1, 1918	.90
November 21, 1918	1.00
March 5, 1920	1.10
July 25, 1920	1.35

The gas company now asks for a further increase.

VICTORY BALL SLAYER HELD ON MURDER CHARGE

Manchester, N. H., Nov. 12.—Andrew Rheaume of No. 1245 Elm street, the Canadian war veteran, who shot and killed Arthur Proulx, also a veteran of the Canadian Forces, was arraigned in police court here on a charge of murder and held without bail for the January term of Superior Court.

The police have learned that Rheaume came to Manchester last May, and has been employed on the construction work of the dam which the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company is putting in at Amoskeag Falls it is stated.

Labels Big Hornet's Nest "Article X."

Norwich, Ct., Nov. 12.—John J. Shea, the news dealer, placed in his show window a large hornet's nest that attracted great crowds. It bore a sign, "Article X.," underneath, "President Wilson, take notice."

This day it has also been learned that earlier in the night he had threatened to "get the bull," who ejected him from the "Victory Ball."

FORE RIVER PLANT TO REBUILD FREIGHTER

H. C. L. CAUSES ITALIAN WORKERS' UNREST

By C. F. BERTELLI,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent

This is the sixth article of a series by Mr. Bertelli on industrial conditions in Italy, written after a personal tour of investigation. This article deals with the cost of living in Italy since the armistice.

Rome, Nov. 12.—The day of the Syracuse innkeeper, who before the war charged his customers two soldi (cents) per hour to drink all the wine they wanted, is gone, so, too, is the day when you could get honest olive oil in an Italian restaurant. The oil they serve in the country of olives today comes from America and costs the controlled price of $1.60 a bottle. Italian olive oil is not to be obtained except surreptitiously at from $2 to $4 compared with a before the war price of 40 cents.

MAY FORCE PROHIBITION.

These two essentially Italian articles—red wine and olive oil—explain perfectly the whole Italian cost of living situation. Living in Rome is probably higher for the Romans than living in New York would be for a Frenchman getting money from home. Probably Paris is the only city in Europe where it costs more to live than in Rome.

The cost of living has in fact attained such proportions that prohibition may be forced, willy nilly, on the one people on earth who voluntarily would have none of it. To an Italian, wine, since immemorial ages, has been part and parcel of his daily allowance, yet thousands of Italians are without wine today because of its cost.

A Roman Senator told me that he traced to this fact the entire social unrest in Italy. Had the profiteers, he said, been content only with the nation's food and rents and clothes, the workingmen would have been silent. But when labor saw wine disappearing over the ever-nearing horizon of high prices, he took the bit between his teeth and bolted.

WORKERS SPENDING MORE.

"In considering the cost of living," said the Senator, "it should be remembered that the Italian worker is eating more today than he ever did before. He is spending his surplus on food and clothes instead of saving it as of yore. The same thing is happening all over the world. The causes which have led to the extraordinary high cost of living in Italy are the identical causes which are at the bottom of all unrest, and they are economic and not social causes.

It is charged by various members of the Italian administration that there has been profiteering on a large scale in nearly every branch of trade. Roman newspapers have been full of the charges and in almost the same breath and in another column, have printed the names of the men they charged as profiteers as recently promoted to rank or to honors.

This resulted in a police campaign which ended in a dozen or so high-placed officials being sent to cool their heels in the Regina Coeli Penitentiary.

HOW PRICES HAVE RISEN.

Cheese, most indispensable adjunct to an Italian menu, is also so scarce that a poor man cannot obtain it. Bread is held down to a fictitious price which the government has stated must shortly be doubled. Ham, 60 cents for two pounds before the armistice, is now 20 lire or $4. Meat has risen from 3 to 16 lire, butter from 3 to 20 lire, beans from 3 cents to 60 cents, fish is about ten times dearer. So also are fruit and vegetables.

Poultry is prohibitive in price and the 3rd Ottobrate or October picnics outside the gates of Rome where fowls were sold for 20 cents apiece have disappeared into legend. The skinniest fowl now costs not 20 cents but 20 lire, and do in the restaurants.

Lamb, formerly 12 cents a kilo, is now 2.40 and hard to get at that, although in Sardinia and the Roman Campagna there are said to be as large flocks of sheep as before the war.

OLD PUNISHMENT URGED.

Profiteering has been alleged to such an extent that there is talk of reviving the old punishment of the popes, called "Tratti Di Corda," or punishment by the rope, which consisted in tying the culprit's arms behind his back with one end of a rope attaching the other end to a high gallows and then letting him drop so that all the bones of the body were jerked out of place.

Royal decrees notwithstanding, rents have soared to the skies, and a similar shortage of houses and flats exists in Rome as in a majority of other European cities where building was stopped for five years.

According to Alfred P. Dennis, commercial attache of the American embassy at Rome, Italy must look abroad, principally to America and Great Britain, for 40 per cent of her food, 50 per cent of her lumber and steel and for practically all coal, cotton per and cotton. Italian factories must look abroad for nearly all their supplies and this will naturally result in keeping the lire down in contrast to the dollar for an indefinite period of readjustment, similarly as the French franc is bound to remain low for the same reason.

"Already there are sinister whispers of bankruptcy for Italy," said Dennis, "but there is no reason to believe (now), Italy will not go broke. But she will be in a bad way financially for a long time, until the elements she possesses in abundance will finally result in a full recovery."

BOSTON FIRM TO BUILD INTERSTATE BRIDGE

Washington, Nov. 11—After a conference between Secretary of the Navy Daniels and the Governors of New Hampshire and Maine a contract was let today for the building of the sub-structure of the bridge across the Piscataqua River, joining Portsmouth, N. It was decided to make the structure a vertical lift bridge, and bids will be asked for completing the superstructure.

REV. HAROLD S. CAPRON TO NEWPORT CHURCH

Newport, R. I., Nov. 11—A unanimous call has been extended to Rev. Harold S. Capron of Bangor, Me., by the United Congregational Church. The pulpit has been vacant since the resignation of Rev. Claris Edwin Silcox on October 1. Rev. Mr. Capron is a graduate of Brown and of Andover Theological Seminary. He had been pastor in Elmira, Rochester and Irondequit, N. Y.

BABSON PREDICTS FURTHER PRICE DROPS

Speaking at the November meeting of the Boston Credit Men's Association in Young's Hotel, Roger W. Babson, president of the Babson Statistical Organization, predicted much lower prices of all commodities for the next five years, after declaring that "business on the surface has few bright spots." He added that "the situation is sound if no one kicks over the apple barrel." The shrinkage in wholesale prices has not reached the retailer as yet, he continued, but is inevitable.

MILLIONAIRE 'IGNORED' BABY

Costa Rican Bride of "Iron King's" Son Brings Suit for Divorce

Aurora, Ill., Nov. 12.—Mrs. Ilda Pisa Crane, pretty Costa Rican bride of Herbert F. Crane, millionaire clubman of New York and Chicago and son of the former iron manufacturer, told the story of her domestic unhappiness when her suit for separate maintenance was called in Circuit Court here.

She said her husband refused to let her drink coffee, accused her of being indecent and that he steadfastly refused to see their baby from the day it was born. She was a striking figure as she sat in the witness chair, gowned in a black dress with a lace throat and brimmed hat.

Just before she took the stand her father, Senor Jacon Pisa, wealthy coffee exporter of San Jose, Costa Rica, entered the courtroom, showing signs of fatigue from his trip from that country.

"Mr. Crane was introduced to me in January, 1916, at the national ball of Costa Rica," she told the jury.

"How often did he see you?" her lawyer asked.

"He was down at the house every day," she replied. "We were married in May, the same year. Four months later we came to the United States, toured the East, and settled at Wild Rose Farm.

"Then he became cruel, irritable, nothing pleased him, he used profane language, said insulting things and suggested I was immoral."

A Startling Test by One of the Greatest Experts in Modern Cookery

24½ lbs. of potatoes fried in 2 lbs. of Mazola.
Only 7 lbs. 14 oz. of potatoes fried in 2 lbs. of lard.

A demonstration of economy of interest to every housewife. Read all the details.

THAT Mazola is the better and more economical fat has again been demonstrated. This time by Mrs. A. Louise Andrea, admittedly one of the greatest experts in modern cookery. Mrs. Andrea proved that 2 lbs. of Mazola fried 24½ lbs. of potatoes. While 2 lbs. of lard fried only 7 lbs. 14 oz. of potatoes.

Tested with fish steaks, one inch in thickness, 2 lbs. of Mazola fried 25¾ lbs. while lard fried only 16½ lbs. of fish.

Of doughnuts cut uniformly 2¾ inches in diameter, 2 lbs. of Mazola fried 208, while 2 lbs. of lard fried only 138.

Facts and Figures Prove Remarkable Economy

This proves conclusively that Mazola goes more than three times as far as lard for frying potatoes; almost twice as far for fish; and two-thirds farther than lard in frying doughnuts.

In each test 4 lbs. of Mazola and 4 lbs. of lard were fried down to 2 lbs.

This confirms the experience of seven million housewives who already use Mazola, the Great American Cooking Medium.

No housewife who wants to use the most wholesome, as well as the most economical cooking and salad oil, should fail to order Mazola from her grocer today.

Equal to Butter at Half the Price—Better Than Lard

Mazola is a 100% pure vegetable fat. There is no loss of bulk from heating—no loss from evaporation.

It always remains sweet and clean—can be used over and over again. Merely strain it.

Sold by all leading grocers in pint, quart, half-gallon and full gallon cans.

Once you try Mazola for Salads you will prefer it to the finest imported olive oils. The price of Mazola is about half that of olive oil. No customs duty—no ocean freight charges on Mazola.

FARMERS SOLVE MILK PROBLEM

Brockton Producers Can Make More Money Through Co-operative Retail Business

Paying themselves 8 per cent. on their investment besides getting much more than the usual price for their product, eighty-nine farmers in and about Brockton run their own dairy, operate their own wagons, and convert milk trade in that section of the state.

Operating their business under the name of the Producers' Dairy Company at No. 737 Belmont street, Brockton, these farmers are able to sell milk to residents of that city one and one-half cents cheaper than it is in Boston. The business is run on a co-operative basis. M J McNamara, manager of the concern, lets the public in on the affairs of the company through the American. He was much impressed with an editorial which appeared in the American of November 4 captioned "Increased Price of Milk Tending to Many Distributors." He declared that editorial is "interesting and timely."

URGES CO-OPERATION.

"I believe farmers throughout the country will be interested in what we are doing in the milk trade," said Mr. McNamara. "They can do the same if they get together like we did. Our company was organized in July, 1917. Its authorized capital is $150,000. Of this amount $106,000 is invested.

"The officers of the company are William S. Howard, president; Albert Manley, vice-president; William J. Parker, treasurer; Walter Pemberton, clerk; J. L. Packard, Brooks Farrar, William C. Leonard, Emmons C. Porter, William Mcleod, Henry Bartlett and George Sylvester, directors. Brooks Farrar represents the holders of preferred stock. He is not allowed to vote with the other directors, who hold the common stock of the company.

STOCKHOLDERS PRODUCERS.

"The holders of common stock must be producers of milk who sell and deliver their product to the corporation—the Producers' Dairy Company.

"We sell 7,200 quarts of milk daily in Brockton. We operate ten retail and two wholesale routes. We use one truck which supplies school children with 400 bottles of milk each school day. We figure to be able to dispose of 1,000 bottles later to the school children. Our dairy is just a mile from the city on the Taunton road. We occupy three acres of land. The milk received at the dairy is from farms in and about Brockton.

MAKES 2 CENTS MORE.

"The farmer makes at least 2 cents a quart more than the Boston price, without deduction for freight or surplus milk. This enables us to deliver milk to the consumer at 1 cent less. The farmers who own the dairy are able, by running it on a co-operative plan, to make 6 per cent. or more on their investment besides getting much more than the usual price for their product.

Maniac Rains Stones Into Crowded Church

Danville, Nov. 12—After exploding a series of bombs of his own manufacture, which did considerable damage, Daunis ran amuck on Bradford street yesterday, an unidentified man and breaking windows in St. Frances' Lithuanian Church. The neighborhood was thrown into panic at the rabid action of the maniac, who threatened the children attending a meeting at the church.

It was then a shower of rocks and stones, which rained down on the people in the church, that the unidentified victim of Daunis sought to prevent him from doing further damage and was stoned. The man had lived alone and had been under observation since one of his former outbreaks of violence. He was employed at the Brown Lumber Co.

Filene's— Talking VALUE— Thinking VALUE— Producing VALUE—

IT IS 6 o'clock. We wanted a subject for a short talk on what Filene's is doing. But one of our buyers has been sitting on our desk—talking. Was he talking about Babe Ruth, or the fast approaching Harvard-Yale game, or the receding election? He was not. He was talking "value."

Almost every other sentence he uttered had something to do with giving the public more for their money.

Filene's is a lively place. People here are active, almost nervously active. There is a spirit of constant change—for the better. And there is much conversation.

And it is truly amazing how much Filene conversation hinges on "value." "I've just succeeded in getting some values." "These are the best values I've ever had—" "We're going to do this thing better—" "This price is going to be less, if I can make it so—"

And just as what we talk about (value) is a reflection of what we think about (value) so what we think about is reflected by what we produce for you (value).

150 unusual $5 Georgette blouses for women

3 styles sketched above. Some with hand-made filet lace. Some with delicately traced lace edgings that are entirely out of the common run. Sizes 36 to 44.

$3 blouses are a hobby of ours

Plenty of the newer colored voile Van Dyke frill blouses—mauve, coffee, Copenhagen or pink. Also the simpler type in white, sketched at right; hand-made filet lace. Sizes 36 to 46.

MORE mohair Norfolk sweaters, $13.50

(Filene's—mail orders filled—fifth floor)

These fancy $3.50 Grace corsets must be seen

IT is too hard to tell their value in a little para-graph. One is a very satiny, beautiful pink brocade; the other a pink batiste with blue silk stripes. Both are materials seldom seen at $3.50. All steels stitched top and bottom. Deep elastic band, low tops. Sizes 21 to 26 and 27. Third floor

Pink satin bandeau brassieres, $1.50

EDGES stitched flat, pink ribbon shoulder straps, elastic back section—all little kinks that women look for. Sizes 32 to 40—to include unusually slender up to quite full types of figures. NOTE—Every corset, no matter how well fitted, needs a brassiere to complete the figure-moulding work it begins. Third floor.

Women's fine boots, nearly 1000 pairs, $9.75

EIGHT styles, including plenty of the wanted ooze-top, one color boots with Cuban heels in all brown or all black. In the group are also boots with gray nubuck or fawn nubuck tops—and also the kind so many women like, all black kidskin. Altogether an unusual group of shoes considered from the standpoint of fine leather or low price. Fifth floor.

Misses' camisoles of "trousseau" silk, $2

TROUSSEAU silk is very heavy, with a weave resembling jersey. Strap shoulders and lace tapering shoulders, both $2. Third floor.

Misses' worsted embroidered tricotine dresses, $25

NOT until this week have we been able to get them to sell for so little. A superior grade of tricotine. Henna or Chinese yellow worsted on collar matches silk facing hip gatherings. Fourth floor.

That intriguing red box

LOOKS like a package of cigarettes—the Filene National hair-net box is a clever touch on your dressing-table or a real friend in need in your hand bag. A dozen large, well-made nets in a box, $1.25. (Street floor)

Wool stockings with short skirts

THE stocking's the thing, now-a-days! And almost everybody wants wool. Pretty imported wool stockings (ribbed) in plain colors, brown, navy and black; heather mixtures in green, light blue, brown, $3.50.

Domestic ribbed wool stockings, brown heather mixtures, $1.20. (Street floor)

Misses' winter weight velours wraps, $50

ONE of the most wanted coats we have. The reason is the large amount of hand work in them, which makes their superiority evident at a glance. Velours, extra heavy; heavy silk lining, warm interlining. Brown and reindeer, $50.

New coats for juniors, $25

(Filene's—mail orders filled—fourth floor)

2,100 ON NAVY HONOR ROLL

War Awards Announced by Daniels; Sims and Fellow Critics Must Call for Theirs

Washington, Nov. 12—The war over the award of naval honors for services in the great conflict which has been waged in Congress and not by Vice-Admiral William S. Sims and a group of flight naval officers on the one side and Secretary of the Navy Daniels on the other for more than a year, ended Armistice Day in a complete victory for the Secretary.

In announcing the awards of medals of honor and letters of commendation, Secretary Daniels stated that in practically every important instance the issue had been settled by the President himself.

In preparing the war Admiral Sims, Rear Admiral Decker, Rear Admiral Henry P. Jones and Commander R. V. Hasbrouck refused to accept medals awarded them on the ground that justice had been refused a large portion of their comrades.

Since that time Admiral Jones made his peace with Secretary Daniels and received a distinguished service medal today.

MUST CALL FOR MEDALS.

The other three are still irreconcilable. A distinguished service medal awarded Admiral Sims lies unclaimed at the Navy Department which has decided that if he desires the honor he must come down from Newport and claim it.

Admiral Decker and Commander Hasbrouck were awarded navy crosses and must also humble themselves and call at the Department if they hope to obtain the reward for their war. Von Decker is now commandant at the Norfolk Navy Yard and Hasbrouck is at sea.

300 NAMES ADDED.

In all there are recipients of eleven medals of honor, 150 distinguished service medals, 1,352 navy crosses and 537 letters of commendation. A total of 2,100 comprise the navy roll of honor during the great war.

Of these 233 are enlisted men, three of whom received medals of honor, ten distinguished service medals, thirty-nine navy crosses and 127 letters of commendation.

The rewards include 300 names not mentioned in Secretary Daniels' original report which he stated at the time was not complete.

In the final awards a medal of honor, which is the highest honor that can be bestowed by the United States with the single exception of the Congressional medal, were given five heroes in addition to the six announced by Secretary Daniels in 1919. By a strange coincidence one of these enjoyed the rank above that of lieutenant.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair dark, glossy and beautiful with sage tea and sulphur. Whenever her hair began to fade, turn gray or streak, she would make a fresh mixture of sage tea and sulphur. Now we can buy this at any drug store for a few cents. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp, falling hair and for restoring color and beauty to gray, lifeless hair. Don't stay gray! Nobody can tell when you darken your hair with this delightful preparation, for it does it so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply moisten a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.—Advertisement.

PEACE CONCLAVE TODAY

MAGNATES MEET IN CHICAGO

Head of New Board of Control to Be Elected—Minors Take Part

Chicago, Nov. 12.—The question when the big league magnates went into session at the Congress Hotel today was who was to head the new baseball Board of Control. That such a body was to be established, along the lines of the Lasker plan, has been certain ever since Ban Johnson's "faithful five" ran up the white flag in Kansas City Wednesday.

There will be the semblance of a scrap over the personnel of the board which is to lead baseball out of the slough of despond, but that is all. The "faithful five" are far too intelligent to think they have any chance of winning, but they will name Judge McCormick, presiding justice at the Cook County Grand Jury investigation of the 1919 world's series scandal, and debate long and ardently concerning his candidacy.

That is all, however. When it comes to voting, the "faithful five" as their name insinuates, have just five votes while the opposition musters eleven. All of which means that Federal Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis can be the new boss of baseball, if he cares to.

Minors Take Part in Conference

A committee of four representing the minor leagues took part in the conference and what they had to say commanded respect from their auditors. The small leagues are far from being small as in the old days and are in position to put up a battle for their rights. That was plainly understood by the major league magnates and the latter were prepared to shave their options, accordingly.

There was expected to be much argument over the personnel of the control, no board other than the head, the Johnson faction and the minors. It was reiterated, being committed to the choice of "practical" baseball men, while the National League and the three American League dissenters were reported to favor an entire non-baseball board. A compromise was expected by which those in close touch with the situation, but it was expected that the man named by the minors would be chosen from their own ranks. Neither of the big league presidents, both of whom were in the lobby at the Congress Hotel when the magnates went into session, were to be considered.

OIL MAN IS EAGER TO PURCHASE BRAVES

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 12.—James Crawford, wealthy oil magnate of Tulsa, Okla., had a long conference with President George Washington Grant of the Braves at which the possibility of the Oklahoman taking over the Boston franchise was discussed.

Crawford is anxious to get into big league baseball. He has had a taste of the game as owner of the Tulsa club but would prefer a higher and is willing to pay a stiff price. But Grant is not overanxious to sell, so the first negotiations went for naught.

Just a few days ago, when it seemed that the Johnson forces would hold out against the Lasker plan and put rival teams in Boston, New York and Chicago, Crawford came forward and offered to back the club in the last-named city to the extent of $2,000,000.

The truce, however, has deprived him of that opportunity, so he is now endeavoring to gain control of some already established club. He said that if he purchased the Braves he was prepared to go the limit in an effort to strengthen the team.

KENILWORTH CLUB HAS BASKETBALL TEAM

Benny Hurvitz announces that the Kenilworth Club of Roxbury will be represented by a professional basketball team this year and are ready to book games with the strongest teams in New England. The Hurvitz brothers and Cotter formerly played with the Shawmuts, while the other boys played with Rose Croix Council in the K. of C. league. Teams desiring to meet the Roxbury five should write to Ben Hurvitz, 10 Millmont street, Roxbury. Tel., Roxbury 3116-J.

CONFIDENCE IN YALE GROWS AS DAY OF GAME APPROACHES

ELIS WORK ON OPEN GAME

Have Assortment of Passes Calculated to Sweep Tigers Off Feet

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Today old Doctor F. B. Dope sailed into his weekly task of picking 'em with much more confidence and much balance than was the case seven days ago.

Just as on a previous Friday the ancient analyst is found backing the general opinion. But he bucked the G. O. on the [illegible] Boston College battle a week past, and he has been [illegible] week since—the Penn State affair and Dartmouth [illegible] of late week form[illegible] two instances. This week [illegible] Yale-Princeton melee, in which the wagering is variously quoted as from 3 to 2 to 5 to 4 on Princeton.

Dartmouth-Penn games are always thrillers, the last [illegible] battle at Franklin Field, which the Green won, 20 to 13, was declared by all observers to have been the most exciting contest of the year, and while the Green won [illegible] it was once more on the [illegible] Dartmouth [illegible] the year.

PRINCETON END NOT CHOSEN

Davis and Stinson Battling for Coveted Chance to Start Game Against Elis

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 11—One [illegible] before the classic battle with [illegible] the fields all but one place right [illegible] practically clinched on the Princeton varsity. For that coveted position Shad Davis and Pd Stinson have been fighting hard all week and so close have they been that [illegible] Roper has been alternating them since the battle with Harvard. It is not probable that the final choice will be made by the Tiger mentor until just before the contest and today he was as much in doubt about it as anyone else.

Davis, who is a senior played end [illegible] last year's varsity against both Yale and Harvard after rapid development in those games performed like a veteran. At the beginning of this season he was considered as a [illegible] for a wing position and started five games there. Then he fell off a bit and Stinson came along so rapidly that he was given the call to go in against the Crimson.

The remainder of the eleven will be the same as that which took the field in Cambridge with Legendre at the other end, Bruce and Keck at tackles, McManus and Dickinson at guard, Captain Mike Callahan at the pivot, Lourie at quarter, Garritt and Young at halfback and Joe Scherer at full.

PEABODY HIGH FAR TOO STRONG FOR SALEM

Salem, Nov. 12—Peabody High defeated Salem High, 34 to 0. A crowd of 4000 people saw the game. Captain O'Connor of Peabody was the star.

YALE SQUAD OFF FOR JUNGLE

First Eleven Has Brief Signal Drill Before Departure From New Haven

New Haven, Nov. 12—A brief signal practice was held by the Yale squad before departing for Princeton today, Head Coach Jones believing that method the best way of starting a football team into a "big game." Jones all season has put emphasis on the need of signal rehearsals and these have been far more frequent this year than ever before.

The forward passing with open formation, which Jones believes to open against the Tigers has been drilled and lectured into the heads of the varsity till they are likely to dazzle the Tigers with it. Jones said today that we now favors setting the backfield muddle by starting Herbert Kempton, the Manlius veteran at quarterback, and Howard Campbell of Lee at left halfback. If this plan goes through either Massachusetts boys will be deposed. They are Thorne Murphy of Westboro and Malcolm Aldrich of Fall River.

Murphy and Aldrich Both Lame

Both have lame ankles and Jones believes in using no players who are limping. No other players have been injected into the lineup this week, although Leon Walker has been switched from left tackle to right tackle, where he will oppose the Princeton rush line star, Stanley Keck. The duel between this pair is expected to rival in spectacular interest that between these two Samsons of the gridiron, Ned Close of Yale and John DeWitt of Princeton, in 1903.

Haverhill Smothers Brookline, 28 to 0

Haverhill, Nov. 12—Haverhill High defeated Brookline High, 28 to 0. It was the former's ninth consecutive victory of the season. The end running of Parsons figured largely in the scoring. H. Legacy made one touchdown on a forward pass from the 20-yard line. Brookline made first down just once and five yards of that came as a penalty when Haverhill was offside. About 7,000 attended the game.

CAVANAUGH TO USE FOY IN TUFTS GAME

Eddie Foy, veteran B. C. lineman who has been acting captain of the second eleven for the past few weeks is expected to enter the Tufts game tomorrow, taking Jim Doyle's place at left guard instead of Frank Mersinger, the last named will probably alternate with either Foy or Dan Mullen, who is at left tackle. In this case Bill Kershner, who has been doing some pretty good punting the last few days will get the kicking assignment, as Tom Swan's appearance in the lineup is not looked for.

REPORTED ROWLAND IS TO MANAGE TIGERS

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 12—Clarence Rowland, former White Sox manager, is slated to succeed Hugh Jennings as manager of the Detroit Tigers, according to reports. One baseball official said Rowland had already been signed, but that announcement was being withheld. President Navin would not discuss it.

HARVARD SUBS AGAINST BEAR

Fisher Prefers Possible Defeat Tomorrow to Loss of Game in Yale Bowl

Harvard will use a substitute lineup against Brown in the Stadium tomorrow. Most of the regulars will be on the bench, but a few will be in Princeton to watch the Yale eleven play the Tigers.

There are three letter men in the [illegible] Sedgwick, Humphrey and Gratwick.

Coach Fisher is taking the chance that his substitute team can trim the Bruins. He prefers a defeat this week to the possibility of one next week against Yale, if players should be hurt tomorrow.

Price has replaced Churchill at right halfback. He is twenty-five pounds heavier and if his kicking powers will serve in that capacity against Yale. Otherwise George Owen will be called on for punting.

BIG SENDOFF FOR DARTMOUTH

Whole College Turns Out to Cheer Players Before Trip to Philadelphia

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 12.—The whole college turned out to give the Dartmouth team a sendoff when it left to tackle Penn at Philadelphia. In view of the comeback that the Green staged at the Polo Grounds last week a victory is expected, in spite of Penn's showing against Pittsburgh.

The Green will be handicapped by the loss of two regular backs, Holbrook and Robertson.

The team was sent through a final signal practice. Burke and Bower took the places of Holbrook and Robertson Dower is about the smallest man on the squad and has started nearly every game this season.

Saugus Rolls Up 26 to Manchester's 0

Saugus, Nov. 12.—Saugus High scored 26 points and at the same time held Manchester High scoreless in the Armistice Day game here. The visitors were outplayed all through the game and never were in a position to score.

Shelburne will start at full and Jordan will complete the backfield.

Lynch and Moore are the choices at ends, although four subs are being taken along for that position, and they all will probably play before the final whistle. The regular tackles, Sonnenberg and Neidlinger are both in perfect condition, and Merritt and Crisp will start as guards, although Dorney and Auchnabach are sure to play a large part of the game. Cunningham, as usual, will start at centre. In all, thirty men, exclusive of managers and coaches, are making the trip.

Newburyport Five Wins

Newburyport, Nov. 12.—The Newburyport A. A. basketball team defeated the 101st Machine Gun Company of Quincy, 58 to 26.

TOE HOLD WINS FOR AJAX

Beats Kilonis in Strenuous Bout of Over Two Hours Before Crowded House

After two hours and seven minutes of strenuous wrestling, Tony Ajax triumphed over John Kilonis in the main bout of Tuckey's tourney at the Grand Opera House. Kilonis succumbed to a double toe hold, but not before he had made it plain that only with that deadly grip allowed could his heavier opponent win. The best house yet of the season saw the bout.

The smashing, aggressive tactics of Kilonis stopped the superior science of Ajax and the latter could only gain the advantage by using the toe hold throughout. Kilonis made a sorry showing against this attack, as he did in applying the same hold in return—like a veritable novice.

TOO NEW TO BE COPIED
In my life time of shoe making I have never produced a shoe that so completely satisfied every demand for supreme style as this new "Resolute".
The last is new, the pattern is new, the color is new. The Resolute is too new even to be imitated.
It has all the swagger brogue effect in the perforations on the toe, the pinkings on the upper and the stitching round the heel.
Yet this medium English toe and the long forepart of the Resolute are different from the heavy effect of the Regular Brogue.
Best of all Style doesn't add to the cost of Emerson Shoes. My policy of stamping the retail price on the soles at the factory based on the costs of materials and labor only, protects you against inflated prices.
Come in and look over our wide variety of smart new models. You will find a shoe you want at just the price you want to pay.

PAUL DOYLE IN LINE FOR TITLE BOUT WITH JACK BRITTON

PROMOTER RICKARD AFTER STAR MIDDLEWEIGHTS

By JACK CONWAY.

Paul Doyle, Boston's entry in the welterweight free-for-all, is very likely to meet Jack Britton in a bout for the world's welterweight title at Madison Square Garden, New York, within a couple of months, Tex Rickard, who picks the pugilistic plums for the Garden, has asked Tony Falzolo, manager of Doyle, for his terms.

Doyle recently showed in New York against Jack Perry of Pittsburgh. The local star secured a draw with the Pittsburgh puncher who has the distinction of having scored a knockdown in a tussle with Britton. Doyle is a big card in New York as he formerly made his home there. As a result, a Britton-Doyle match would be sure to draw big.

Before tackling the welterweight boss, Tony Falzolo's champion is going to battle a number of rivals in New England rings. Wardie Jimmy Duffy, Eddie Shevlin and maybe Nate Siegal will try to dispose of Doyle and thus knock him out of his match with Britton.

As A. Muxy would say, "When you're up they try to pull you down and when you're down they try to make your face look like an egg connected jumping on it."

Commercial Club Back in Old Home

"All's well."

This is the report that we received today from Bowdoin Square. The old rendezvous of some of our famous citizens has been rather lonesome looking of late. All this was due to the fact that Bob McKirdy switched the headquarters of the Commercial Club from Bowdoin Square to the Grand Opera House. The patrons of the club didn't like the change in things and McKirdy has complied with their wishes and moved back to his old quarters. He has also abandoned his Wednesday night shows and is now operating on the Friday night schedule.

Friday night has always been a good one for boxing in Boston. Therefore, McKirdy and his associates in the Commercial Club should profit. Robert, by the way, has had his evening clothes sponged and pressed so that he will make a nifty appearance when he greets his guests at the old stamping ground.

McKirdy intends to stick to his cards of action. Three ten-round bouts and a six-round affair he believes are what are wanted by the fans.

"I now have some place to go Friday nights when the wife beans me with a bottle of home brew," said A. Muxy in a philosophical way as he breezed into the sporting sanctum this a. m.

Joe Welling Picked to Box Leonard

New York, Nov. 12.—Joe Welling of Chicago has been picked as the opponent of Champion Benny Leonard in the lightweight title bout to be held at Madison Square Garden, November 23, Promoter Rickard announces.

Gardini vs. Michailoff at Scenic Temple

Renato Gardini, who has become a great drawing card in Boston, will meet Ivan Michailoff in a finish match at the Scenic Temple next Wednesday night under the direction of Lou Daro. Gardini recently tried to throw three wrestlers on the same evening. He disposed of his first two opponents and then jumped up against Michailoff. The latter proved too tough for the local favorite and the match ended with honors even.

Shevlin Gunning for Siegal

Eddie Shevlin is now out to land a return match with Nate Siegal. When this pair last time, Shevlin grabbed the verdict. Unfortunately for Roxbury Eddie, Siegal was not the welterweight boss at that time. Shevlin showed he is punching harder than at any time in his career by the way he polished off Eddie McAndrews at the Carlyle Club. Shevlin, strange to say, would probably go to the post a favorite if he were to meet Siegal in a title contest.

JOHNNY CLINTON TO LOCATE IN BOSTON

Johnny Clinton, New York 135-pound boxer, intends to locate in Boston. He is now being managed by Eddie Mack, who is eager to match his new protege with any 135 pound performer. Clinton has beaten most of the star lightweights and welterweights, and should prove a healthy addition to the local featherfield.

Alleges Claim of $35,000 in Filing Bankruptcy Petition Against Yankee Photo Corp.

New York, Nov. 12.—George Herman (Babe) Ruth, slugging outfielder of the New York Americans, has filed an involuntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States District Court against the Yankee Photo Corporation, No. 1476 Broadway, alleging a claim of $10,000 for services rendered under a contract made on July 1, 1920.

SPORT EDITORIAL

A One-Man Issue

From this distance, the issue in the threatened baseball war seems to be one man. He is B. B. Johnson. It is inconceivable that but for Johnson the five American League club owners who are now aligned with Johnson would have declined to meet the National Leaguers and their three American League associates half way.

Thus what appears to be the obstinacy of one man may precipitate the most costly baseball conflict in the history of the game, a fight that may leave ruin for many in its wake.

Johnson claims that the reorganization of baseball on the lines laid down by the National Leaguers and the three American Leaguers, placing the government in the hands of a non partisan body, is not the best thing for baseball.

Time may prove that he is right, but it is going to cost millions of dollars and a tremendous loss of public interest in the game before time can make out Johnson's case.

At present it is the consensus of opinion of a great majority of the baseball people that Johnson is wrong. For many years in his baseball career he was an able and astute leader and men followed him without question, but now even many of his old followers oppose his judgment.

It would seem only fair that Johnson for once give their ideas a trial. Leaders often carry their following to disastrous consequences through mistakes in judgment, and even sheer obstinacy, and in this case it would appear that Johnson is taking tremendous risks for no appreciable gain.

If it is to be a war, however, it will probably be a war to the finish, and with reference to the final outcome Ban B. Johnson will occupy much the same position as one Wilhelm, of Germany, during the unpleasantness which closed two years ago tomorrow.

Ban will either wind up ruler of his own particular little universe, or his name will be mud.

And in either event there will be left a great deal of wonder at the uselessness of it all.

MR. Hubbell had his way, he'd make this town look like a Connecticut village — he'd drive all the prostitutes out of it. All the railroads would have to abandon their terminals—there'd be no more traffic, and you'd have to walk across the bridge to get a drink."

"Well," said Mr. Plimpton, "Tom Beatty's good enough for me, for a while."

Beatty, Hodder knew, was the "boss" of the city, with headquarters in a downtown saloon.

"Beatty's been maligned," Mr. Varnum declared. "I don't say he's a saint, but he's run the town pretty well, on the whole, and kept the vice where it belongs, out of sight. He's made his pile, but he's entitled to something—we all are. You always know where you stand with Beatty. But see, if Hubbell and his crowd——"

"Don't worry about Bodloe—he'll get called in, he'll come home to roost like the rest of them," said Mr. Plimpton, cheerfully. "The people can't govern themselves—only Bodloe doesn't know it. Some day he'll find it out."

The French window beside him was open and Hodder slipped out, unnoticed. Into the warm night and stood staring at the darkness. His one desire had been to get away, out of hearing, and he pressed forward over the tiled pavement until he stumbled against a stone balustrade that guarded a drop of four feet or so to the lawn below. At the same time he heard his name called.

"Is that you, Mr. Hodder?"

He started. The voice had a wistful tremulousness, and might almost have been the echo of the leaves stirring in the night air. Then he perceived, in a shaft of light from one of the drawing-room windows near by, a girl standing beside the balustrade; and as she came towards him, with tentative steps, the light played conjurer, catching the silvery gauze of her dress and striking an aura through the fine of her hair.

"It's Nan Ferguson," she said.

"Of course," he exclaimed, collecting himself. "How stupid of me not to have recognized you."

"I'm so glad you came out," she went on impulsively, yet shyly, "I wanted to tell you how sorry I was that—that thing happened at the table"

"I like that young man," he said.

"Do you?" she exclaimed, with unexpected gratitude. "So do I. He really isn't—so bad as he must seem."

"I'm sure of it," said the rector, laughing

"I was afraid you'd think him wicked," said Nan. "He works awfully hard, and he's sending a brother through college, and he isn't a bit like—some others I know. He wants to make something of himself. And I feel responsible, because I had mother ask him tonight."

He read her secret. No doubt she meant to do so.

"You know we're going away next week, for the Summer—that is, mother and I," she continued. "Father comes later. And I do hope you'll make us a visit, Mr. Hodder—we were disappointed you couldn't come last year." Nan hesitated, and thrusting her hand into her gown drew forth an envelope and held it out to him. "I intended to give you this tonight, to—to—for anything you thought best."

He took it gravely. She looked up at him.

"It seems so little—such a selfish way of discharging one's obligations, just to write out a cheque, when there is so much trouble in the world that demands human kindness as well as material help. I dress up Dalton street pretty often, from downtown. You know how hot it was! And I couldn't help thinking how terrible it is that we who have everything are so heedless of all that misery. The thought of it took away all my pleasure. . . . I'd do something more, something personal, if I could. Perhaps I shall be able to, next winter. Why is it so difficult for all of us to know what to do?"

"We have taken a step forward, at any rate, when we know that it is difficult," he said

She gazed up at him fixedly, her attention caught by an indefinable something in his voice, in his smile, that thrilled and vaguely disturbed her. She remembered it long afterwards. It suddenly made her shy again; as if, in faring forth into the darkness, she had come to the threshold of a mystery, of a revelation withheld; and it brought back the sense of adventure, of the palpitating fear and daring with which she had come to meet him.

"It is something to know," she repeated, half comprehending. The scraping of chairs within alarmed her, and she stood ready to fly.

"But I haven't thanked you for this," he said, holding up the envelope. "It may be that I shall find some one in Dalton street—"

"Oh, I hope so," she faltered, breathlessly, hesitating a moment. And then she was gone, into the house.

CHAPTER IX.
The Divine Discontent.

I.

IT was the last Sunday in May, and in another week the annual flight to the seashore and the mountains would have begun again. The breezes stealing into the church through the open casements wafted hither and thither the odors of the chancel flowers, and mingled with those fainter and subtler perfumes set free by the rustling of Summer gowns.

As on this day he surveyed his decorous and fashionable congregation, Hodder had something of that sense of extremity we have in spots of opposite to the Gentiles himself must have felt when he stood in the midst of the Areopagus and made his vain yet sublime appeal to Athenian indifference and luxury. "And the times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men everywhere to repent." . . . Some, indeed, stirred uneasily as the rector paused, lowering their eyes before the intensity of his glance, vaguely realising that the man had flung the whole passion of his being into the appeal.

Heedlessness—that was God's accusation against them, against the age. Materialism, and indifferentism! So absorbed were they in the pursuit of wealth, of distraction, so satisfied with the current philosophy, so intoxicated with themselves with beautiful things and thus shutting out the sterner view, that they had grown heedless of the divine message. How few of them availed themselves of their spiritual birthright to renew their lives at the altar rail. And they had permitted their own children to wander away. . . . Remorse!

There was a note of desperation in his appeal, like that of the hermit who stands on a mountain crag and warns the gay and thoughtless of the valley of the coming avalanche. Had they heard him at last? There were a few moments of tense silence during which he stood gazing at them he raised his arm in benediction, gathered up his surplice, descended the pulpit steps and crossed swiftly the chancel.

He had, as it were, turned on all the power in a supreme effort to reach them. What if he had failed again? Such was the melancholy that beset him, after the service, as he got out of his surplice, communicated by some occult telepathy. Mr. Parr was awaiting him, and summoning his courage, hope battling against intuition, he opened the door into the now empty church and made his way toward the porch, where the sound of voices warned him that several persons were lingering. The nature of their congratulations confirmed his doubts Mrs Plimpton, enfeebled and looking less robust than usual in one of her Summer Paris gowns, greeted him effusively

"Oh, Mr. Hodder, what a wonderful sermon!" she cried. "I can't express how it made me feel—so delinquent! Of course that is exactly the effect it was intended. And I was just telling Wallis I was so glad I waited until Tuesday to go East, or I should have missed it. You surely must come on to Plimpton and visit us, and preach it over again in our little stone church there, by the sea. Good—and don't forget! I'll write you, setting the date, only we'd be glad to have you any time"

"One of the finest I ever heard—if not the finest," Mr. Plimpton declared, with a kind of serious engrossment, squeezing his hand

Others were shaking him. Even Constable, for one, and the austere Mrs. Atterbury. Hodder would have avoided the ever familiar face of her son, Gordon, in the invariable Black cutaway and checked trousers, but he was standing beside Mr. Parr.

"Ahem! Why, Mr. Hodder," he exclaimed, squinting off his glasses, "that was magnificent effort I was saying to Mr. Parr that it isn't often one hears a sermon nowadays as able as that, and as sound. Many clergymen refrain from preaching them, I sometimes think, because they are afraid people won't like them."

A scene from "The Inside of the Cup," the great story which will be shown soon in motion pictures at the best theatres. Rev. John Hodder here visits Mrs. Garvin, whose husband is the victim of a rich church-going hypocrite. She tells Hodder that Garvin is against church people.

"I scarcely think it's that," the rector replied, a little shortly. "We're afraid people won't heed them"

"I scarcely think it's that," the rector replied, a little shortly. "We're afraid people won't heed them"

His became aware, as he spoke, of a tall young woman, who had cast an enigmatic glance first at Gordon Atterbury, and then at himself

"It was a good sermon," said Mr Parr. "You're coming to lunch, Hodder?"

The rector nodded. "I'm ready when you when you are," he answered.

The Motor's Waiting

"The motor's waiting" said the banker, leading the way down the steps to the sidewalk, where he turned. "Allison, let me introduce Mr. Hodder This is my daughter," he added simply.

This sudden disclosure of the young woman's identity had upon Hodder a certain electric effect, and with it came a realization of the extent to which—from behind the scenes, so to-speak—she had gradually aroused him to a lively speculation. She seemed to have influenced, to a greater or less degree, so many lives with which he had come into touch! Compelled persons to make up their minds about her. And while he sympathized with Eldon Parr in his abandonment, he had never achieved the condemnation which—he felt—an impartial Christian morality would have meted out.

As he uttered the conventional phrase and took her hand, he asked himself whether her personality justified his interest. Her stance at Gordon Atterbury in the midst of that gentleman's felicitations on the sermon had been expressive. Hodder thought, of veiled amusement slightly tinctured with contempt: and he, Hodder, felt himself to have grown warm over it. He could not be sure that Alison Parr had not included, in her inner comment, the sermon likewise, on which he had so spent himself What was she doing at church? As her eyes met his own, he seemed to read a challenge. He had never encountered a woman—he decided—who so successfully concealed her thought, and at the same time so incited curiosity about it.

The effect of her appearance on Gordon Atterbury was painfully apparent. Mrs. Larrabbee's remark, "that he had never got over it," recurred to Hodder. He possessed the virtue of being faithful, at least, in spite of the lady's sponsory, and he seemed to be galvanized into a tenfold nervousness as he hunted after them and handed her, with the elaborate attention little men are apt to bestow upon women, into the motor.

"Some one shall you be here, Alison?" he asked.

"I don't know" she answered, not unkindly, but with a touch of indifference

"You treat us shamefully," he informed her, "upon my word! But I'm coming to call

"Do," said Alison. Hodder caught her eye again, and this time he was sure that she surprised in him a certain disdain of Mr. Atterbury's zeal. Her smile was faint, yet unmistakable.

He resented it. Indeed, it was with a well-defined feeling of antagonism that he took his seat, and this was enhanced as they flew westward. Mr. Parr wholly absorbed with the speaking, trumpet, energetically rebuking at every bounce. In the back of the rector's mind lay a weight which he identified, at intervals, with what he was now convinced was the failure of his sermon. . . . Alison took no part in the casual conversation that began when they reached the boulevard and Mr. Parr abandoned the trumpet, but lay back in silence and apparently with entire comfort in a corner of the limousine

At the lunch table Mr. Parr plunged into a discussion of some of the still undecided details of the new settlement house, in which, as the plans developed, he had become more and more interested. He had made himself responsible, from time to time, for additional sums, until the original estimate had been almost doubled. Most of his suggestions had come from Hodder, who had mastered the subject with a thoroughness that appealed to the financier; and he had gradually accepted the rector's idea of concentrating on the children. Thus he had purchased an adjoining piece of land that was to be a model playground, in connection with the gymnasium and swimming pool. The hygienic department was to be all that modern science could desire.

"If we are going to do the thing," the banker would remark, "we may as well do it thoroughly; we may as well be leaders and not followers."

So, little by little, the scheme had grown to proportions that sometimes appalled the rector when he realized how largely he had been responsible for the additions—in spite of the lukewarmness with which he had begun. And yet it had occasionally been Mr. Parr who, with a sweep of his hand, had added a thousands to a purely fanciful picture; thus the dance-hall had become, in prospect, a huge auditorium for all the top of the building, where the children were to have their kindergartens and games in Winter, and which might be shaded and opened up to the breezes, in Summer. What had reconciled Hodder to the enterprise most of all, however, was the chapel—in the plans a beautiful Gothic church—whereby he hoped to make the religious progress keep pace with the social uplift. He had never encountered a woman—he decided—who so successfully concealed her thought, and at the same time so incited curiosity about it.

The effect of her appearance on Gordon Atterbury was painfully apparent. Mrs. Larrabbee's remark, "that he had never got over it," recurred to Hodder. He possessed the virtue of being faithful, at least, in spite of the lady's sponsory, and he seemed to be galvanized into a tenfold nervousness as he hunted after them and handed her, with the elaborate attention little men are apt to bestow upon women, into the motor.

"Some one shall you be here, Alison?" he asked.

"I don't know" she answered, not unkindly, but with a touch of indifference

"You treat us shamefully," he informed her, "upon my word! But I'm coming to call

"Do," said Alison. Hodder caught her eye again, and this time he was sure that she surprised in him a certain disdain of Mr. Atterbury's zeal. Her smile was faint, yet unmistakable.

He resented it. Indeed, it was with a well-defined feeling of antagonism that he took his seat, and this was enhanced as they flew westward. Mr. Parr wholly absorbed with the speaking, trumpet, energetically rebuking at every bounce.

At ease, and asked himself whether she had beauty, and it dawned upon him little by little that the very proportion she possessed made for physical unobtrusiveness. She was really very tall for a woman. At first he would have said her nose was straight, when he perceived that it had a delicate hidden curve; her eyes were curiously set, her dark hair parted in the middle, brought down low on each side of the forehead and tied in a Grecian knot. Thus, in truth, he observed, were seemingly all the elements of the classic, even to the firm yet slender column of the neck. How had it eluded him?

Her remark, if it astonished Hodder, had a dynamic effect on Eldon Parr. And suddenly the rector comprehended that the banker had not so much been talking to him as through him; had been, as it were, courting opposition.

"What do you mean by Christianity being incendiary?" he demanded.

"Incendiary, from my point of view—I made the qualification," Alison replied, apparently unmoved by his obvious irritation. "I don't pretend to be a Christian, as you know, but if there is one element in Christianity that distinguishes it, it is the brotherhood of man. That's pure nitroglycerine, though it's been diluted with so much sawdust. Incendiary is a mild epithet. I never read the sermons you refer to, I dare say they're crude, but they're probably attempts to release an explosive which would blow your comfortable social system and its authority into atoms."

Hodder, who had listened in amazement, glanced at the banker. He had never before heard him opposed, or seen him really angry.

I've heard that doctrine," cried Mr. Parr, "Those who are dissatisfied with things as they are because they have been too stupid or too weak or self-indulgent to rise, find it easy to twist the principles of Christianity into revolutionary propaganda. It's a case of the devil quoting Scripture. The brotherhood of man! There has never been an age when philanthropy and organized charity were so much a cause as today.

A certain gallant, indomitable ring crept into Alison's voice; she did not seem in the least dismayed or overborne.

"But isn't that just where most so-called Christians make their mistake?" she asked. "Philanthropy and organized charity, as they exist today, have very little to do with the brotherhood of man. Mightn't it be you who are ? yourselves instead of the incendiaries fooling themselves? So long as you can make yourselves believe that this kind of charity is a logical carrying out of the Christian principles, so long are your consciences satisfied with the social system which your class, very naturally, finds so comfortable and edifying. The weak and idiotic ought to be absurdly grateful for what is flung to them, and heaven is gained in the throwing. In this way the rich inevitably become the elect, both here and hereafter, and the needle's eye is widened into a gap."

There was on Mr. Parr's lips a smile not wholly pleasant to see, indeed, in the last few minutes there had been revealed to Hodder a side of the banker's character which had escaped him in the two years of their acquaintance.

"I suppose," said Mr. Parr, slowly, drumming on his table, "you would say that of the new settlement house of St. John's, whereby we hope to raise a whole neighborhood"

"Yes, I should," replied Alison, with spirit. "The social system by which you thrive, and in which politically and financially you strive to maintain, is diametrically opposed to your creed, which is supposed to be the brotherhood of man. But if that were really your creed, you would work for it politically and financially. You would see that your church is trying to do infinitesimally what the government, but for your opposition, might do universally. Your true creed is the survival of the fittest. You grind these people down into what is really an economic slavery and dependence, and then you insult and degrade them by inviting them to exercise and read books and sing hymns in your settlement house, and give their children crackers and milk and kindergartens and sunlight! I don't blame them for not becoming Christians on that basis. Why the very day I left New York a man over eighty, who had been swindled out of all he had, rather than go to one of those Christian institutions, deliberately forged a check and demanded to be sent to the penitentiary! He said he could live and die there with some self-respect!"

"I might have anticipated that you would ultimately become a Socialist, Alison," Mr. Parr remarked—but he voice trembled.

"I don't know whether I am a Socialist or an Anarchist," she answered. Hodder thought he detected a note of humblessness in her voice, and the spirit in it ebbed a little. Not only did she seem indifferent to her father's anger—which incidentally added fuel to it —but her splendid disregard of him, as a clergyman, had made an oddly powerful appeal. And her argument! His feelings, as he listened to this tremendous arraignment of Eldon Parr by his daughter, are not easily to be described. To say that she had compelled him, the rector of St John's, at last to look in the face those conditions which he had refused to recognize would too definite a statement. Nevertheless, some dumb thing had occurred. Refutations sprang to his lips, and died there, though he had no notion of uttering them. He saw that to admit her contentions would be to behold crumble into ruins the structure that he had spent a life in rearing; and yet something within him responded to her words—they had the passionate, convincing ring of truth

By no means the least of their disturbing effects was that of [illegible] fact that they came as a climax, as a fulfilment of the revelation he had had at the Pergamene, when something of the true nature of Mr Plimpton and others of his congregation had suddenly been laid bare. And now Hodder looked at Eldon Parr to behold another man from the one he had known, and in that moment realized that their relationship could never again be the same. . . . Were his sympathies with the daughter?

"I don't know what I believe," said Alison, after a pause. "I've ceased trying to find out. What's the use?" She appeared now to be addressing no one in particular

A servant entered with a card, and the banker's hand shook perceptibly as he put down his claret and adjusted his glasses.

"Show him into my office upstairs, and tell him I'll see him at once," he said, and glanced at the rector. But it was Alison whom he addressed. "I must leave Mr. Hodder to answer your arguments," he added, with an attempt at lightness, and then to the rector: "Perhaps you can convince her that the Church is more afraid against than sinning, and that Christians are not such terrible monsters after all. You'll excuse me?"

"Certainly" Hodder had risen.

FROM THE TIME when Venus turned her bewitching orbs in the direction of one Adonis, much to that gentleman's discomfort, beauty has been keeping men's pulses above and below normal. There is nothing finer in the world than this gift of nature, provided the beauty is of a truly fine type. What is your idea of beauty? Does it agree with Mr. Brisbane's? Here in New England, we have always prided ourselves on the mentality of our women folks. Thus, a beautiful face which reflects a fine character and high intellectuality, might be called the New England type of feminine loveliness. Perhaps you have some friend who comes under this class. If you have, induce her to send in her photograph

THE BOSTON AMERICAN offers $5,000 in gold for photographs of lovely girls. To the girl declared by the judges to be the loveliest girl in New England, the American will pay $3,000 in gold. To the next in merit, $1,000 in gold. There will be two third prizes of $500 each. In awarding the prizes the judges will have in mind Arthur Brisbane's definition of beauty. Mr. Brisbane says beauty is "intelligence in a fine setting." The judges will study the photographs, first for intelligence, second for health, and third for physical beauty. There are no strings attached. Just send in your photograph of your friends to the "Loveliest Girl Editor," Boston American, P. O. Box 239, Boston 9, Mass.

Stocks Weak at Noon; Call Rate 9%; Foreign Exchange Up

RAILS RECEDE IN NEW YORK

Oils, Coppers, Leathers and Tires Yield to Bear Pressure; U. S. Steel, Firm

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were weak in New York at noon, prices being close to the lowest forenoon level. In the second hour selling pressure was renewed. Coppers became more active and went down, Reseca, Lead and Utah declined three points. Rails participated in the downward movement but their losses averaged small. Atlantic Gulf and U. S. Rubber, Cuban American and Punta Alegre sold at year lows in the last half of the morning. Among weak issues were Atlantic Gulf, Hide and Leather preferred, Beet Sugar, Bethlehem B, Marine preferred, New Haven, S. Rubber and Royal Dutch. They were off from two to four points.

Call money opened at 9 per cent. Foreign exchange rates advanced, opening quotations being: Germany, opening $3.38⅜, up ⅜ cents; France, $6.87½, up $.0092; lire $.0015½; marks $.0113, up $.0021.

TONE HEAVY AT OPENING.

While the initial movement was irregular, the tone was heavy at the opening and price losses to say all along the line. Within half an hour the market became weak. Early losses from fractions to 2 points to as much as five points for Endicott Johnson, but as a rule they were small. Laggards were the rubbers and coppers in the recessional, several selling at new lows for the year. The leathers also sagged. Within a few minutes eighteen issues had sold at their lowest for 1920, they being Hide and Leather common and preferred, Central Leather, Endicott Johnson, First Tire, Apex Rubber, Keystone Tire, International Harvester, General Electric, Marine common and preferred, American Can, Ship and Commerce, American Zinc, Chile, Bethlehem B, Consolidated Textile and Steel. Other issues showed early strength and equipments were still firmer. Oils had a good opening, but like stocks, soon became irregular. Motors and sugars did not change much. They sagged the day before.

BEARS WERE AGGRESSIVE.

Although the decline in the call rate yesterday, money opening at 9 low as seven per cent, before the close, was expected to be a reassuring influence began very early. At the opening today and did not long delay in launching a fresh attack. They found some weak spots in the steel list, Bethlehem B yielding the most, Royal Dutch was a exception. Contrary to expectation most of the orders which accumulated overnight were to sell. The public is concerned in the market to small extent just now and the professional trading element is more hesitant than at any time this year. Before the end of an hour there was enough scattering to halt the decline and while raiders paused the market rallied a little.

Rail Orders

In regard to steel rail buying, the Iron Age says that Eastern roads have practically placed their 1921 requirements. The bulk of the orders went to the U. S. Steel Corporation and two independents and all are subject to a price yet to be named.

PRICES LOWER IN BOSTON

Maine Central Continues Its Slump; Other Rails Recede; Curb Reactionary

Prices ruled lower at the opening in Boston and the early weakness shown here was unrelieved during the forenoon session, a few issues showing small, however, and sufficient aggregate sentiment rather than any overnight development. Lows for the day were reached soon by Swift & Co., International Paper preferred, Atlas Tack. Among issues to recede a point or more were Massachusetts Gas, New Haven, Agricultural Chemical and Swift & Co. United Fruit opened a point higher, but quickly lost half of the gain and then recovered it and more. Other early advances were National Maine Central common sold off six points to 49 on its first transaction, reflecting Atlantic City's that there will be no disbursement on this issue since the preferred dividend has been passed. Action on the common dividend is due next month.

Boston & Maine receded 1½ in the second hour and its preferred A dropped two. New Haven's loss was increased 1¼ at this juncture. Rubbers got a better tone and several showed gains before the session ended.

Small losses were sustained by U. S. Smelting, Cuban Dist, National Leather, International Cement, Reseca, Edison, North Butte and Armadoga, with fractions to a point in Cuban Cane, Calumet & Arizona, Copper Range, Ventura, Greenfield Tap and New England Telephone.

CURB MARKET RALLIED

The Curb Market was quiet all the morning and the tone receded 1¼ but rallied a little before noon. Early leaders were Albany Rubber, Merrimac Development, Texarra, and Verde Mines. Among issues to advance at the opening were Hanley, Seven Metals, Verde Mines and Southwestern Miami, full paid. Losses on initial sales were sustained by Allied Oil, American Oil, Bagdad, Eureka, Hecla Divide, Sierra, Silver Development, South-ern States and Texana.

At the end of an hour Albany Divide was off 2 cents at 28 cents; Merrimac Development, 5 cents at 17 cents; Texarra, 3 cents at 24 cents; Verde, 3 cents at 65 cents; and Southern States, 2 cents at 53 cents. Among gains were Hecla Divide, up at cents; Boston & Montana, 1 cent at 42 cents; and Verde Mines, 3 cents at 68 cents. Bagdad had recovered its loss.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NOTES.

Worcester, Mass. will receive proposals until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow for $200,000, dated Nov. 15, and payable Feb. 4, 1921.

Boston has received proposals for an issue of $2,000,000 Province of Nova Scotia 6 per cent. bonds, dated Dec. 1, 1920, which will be payable, principal and interest, in Boston, New York and Montreal, at the savings banks in Vermont, New Hampshire and Massachusetts.

Fall River, Mass., awarded $200,000 "Operation" bonds, dated Nov. 1, 1920, and payable $10,000 yearly, 1921 to 1940, at 5 per cent, bidding 100.13. The city also awarded $200,000 bonds, dated Nov. 1, 1920, to Harris Forbes & Co. at 4¾ per cent, bidding 100.13.

According to a local financial publication Punta Alegre says the profit from the present stock area with sugar at its current price.

Simon Mines shareholders will meet to ratify the proposal to cancel 50,000 of the 200,000 authorized issue of $10 par value share. Stockholders of record November 10 are entitled to four shares of new stock for their holdings to the company on or before December 15, when the old stock is retired.

The Mohawk Mining Co. will enter the new year with cash on hand, ample stocks of copper and will close 1920 with its dividend fully earned.

The profit for the first nine months of 1920 by the Western Consolidate Oil Fields amounted to $2,753,000 after all charges and taxes, or at the rate of more than $4 per share on outstanding stock.

October sales by the Waldorf System totaled $2,667,000, against $2,000,000 for the corresponding 1919 month, an increase of approximately 33⅓ per cent.

Plans contemplate building the substructure of a bridge across the Piscataqua river, John-son county, Indiana, for which $1,000,000 has been awarded to Holbrook, Cabot & Rollins Co., Boston contractors.

More Mail Order Sales

Mail order business is said to be increasing and this indicates that the public has begun to buy at current prices. It is stated by a Montgomery Ward & Co. official that orders received by that concern show a marked increase for ten days past. The amount of recently received orders, especially farming districts, is above the average.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Nov. 12.—Selling was renewed at the opening of the cotton market, and after a few minutes prices were 30 to 40 points lower. There was little demand to absorb the increased offerings. Liverpool was unexpectedly weak and sold here on stop orders. There was no trade talk.

Private cables from Liverpool reported that there will be no ginning report on Saturday and said that the start there was some scattered covering by the trade and by shorts. Following the opening prices rallied but fluctuations remained unsettled. The market closed steady at net declines of 10 to 15 points. Opening prices: March, 17.85; May, 17.90; July, 17.70; Oct. 17.06.

One Hundred Investment Bargains in Railroad Bonds

In a circular prepared by one of the greatest bond authorities in this country, which we have just had printed, the bond situation is not only thoroughly analyzed but there is a list of one hundred bargains in high grade railroad bonds yielding 6 to 8%.

Ten Per Cent

Among this list are many unusual investment opportunities, and inasmuch as underlying factors are now favorable to the entire bond market, a selection of these bonds would unquestionably result in excellent market profits, in addition to an attractive income return.

The circular will be sent without obligation, together with a booklet describing a convenient method of purchasing the bonds.

STAGE STAR

MARJORIE RAMBEAU.

RAMBEAU TIRED OF WEEPING

Star of "The Sign on the Door" to "Strike" Against Playing Ladies in Distress

By FRED J. McISAAC.

"Thank you, Anna, you are a good girl."

"That's the last line in "The Sign on the Door."

When they said it at the matinee I was standing in the wings with the stage agent, and I couldn't see a blessed thing. If anybody invites you to see a show from the wings don't do it, because the actors perform on box stalls nowadays, and the old fashioned open wings, with a lot of deadheads standing behind each wing, are things of the past, like the old fashioned heroine in Ike Swedrama, starving in the streets with diamonds and silk stockings plainly visible.

NO "PRESCRIPTIONS" NEEDED.

Musing thusly, I was disturbed by a lot of stage hands tearing away the walls of the room in which Anna was told she was a good girl, and ramming them directly where I stood. The Majestic is a nice little theatre, but there isn't enough season behind the scene. So the P. A. and myself made for an iron and steep staircase which led up to the stage dressing room.

"Up the light ladder, slender and tall,

To the highest window in the wall."

It wasn't as bad as that but it is quite a skinny to be dressing room where Marjorie Rambeau was shedding the personality of "Anna, the good girl."

Miss Rambeau is the modern melodramatic actress, a person who can act, and whose jewelry is always properly pawned when she is starving in the street. Not that she starved in "The Sign on the Door." There is more to eat and drink, especially to drink, in that show than anybody in Boston can procure without a prescription from a physician. But the piece is a melodrama in which the poor girl gets arrested in the first scene and is caught in a gentlemanly room in the succeeding ones, and yet can be truthfully addressed after all this as "Anna, you are a good girl."

IS WESTERN GIRL.

Well Miss Rambeau is not only a good girl, but a good fellow, for she was as frank and open as a Waterbury and she gave me a grip of the hand the way the girls do in the William Hart photopigs when they throw themselves off their horses and greet the hero.

And why not? Isn't Miss Rambeau a western girl? Sure she is.

"Certainly, I am a western girl," said Miss Rambeau. "Far west. Alaska and California. Sixteen years in the show business. But I have heard they don't like western girls very much in Boston. Is that so?

"First I heard of it. Anyway they would make an exception in your case.

"I like Boston, anyway. I was here once before, you know, in a little farce called "Sadie Love," and I was anxious to come in "Eyes of Youth" in which I really made a hit in New York, but my manager took me out of the cast and put me in another one so I didn't get here until now."

"Welcome," I said formally to that, for Miss Rambeau is quite an addition to our population, a decorative addition.

WANTS COMEDY PART.

"My husband and I have just had a wonderful vacation," said the star. "We went to Europe, and a wonderful part of it was the joy we felt to get our feet on our own soil again. You know I am half Irish and half French, but from now on I am not mentioning the French part of it. You have no idea how nasty the French people are being at present to Americans. We didn't find them enough money, I guess. Then we went into Holland and the Dutch were being mean to Americans, too. The Dutch can be meaner than the French, and what they were all out for was the tourists. However, we managed to enjoy ourselves.

"What are you going to do after "The Sign on the Door" closes?

"I am going to get a laughing part. I love comedy, and I seem to do nothing but play weeping parts of ladies in distress. I am going on a strike against crying as sure as you are born. Nary a tear in my next play. I am going to make you fail out of your seat laughing."

Then Miss Rambeau began to remove Anna, the good girl's complexion and I went away.

To Look Young Quickly For Special Occasion

How often have you fussed and puttered with your face on the eve of some important social event when you wanted to look your prettiest, and try what you would you just could not get the desired result! Next time your face becomes unruly, exhibiting a careworn and eager appearance, and crisscrossed with fine lines, here something that will quickly transform it into one of youthful freshness.

Just get an ounce of powdered saxolite at your druggist's, mix this with about a half pint of witch hazel, and bathe your face in the solution for two or three minutes. Immediately after you feel a "firming up" of the skin and underlying tissue, which naturally irons out the wrinkles, crow's feet and flabbiness. The contour and general appearance of your face are greatly improved, you will be glad you heard of this simple and harmless method.—Advertisement.

I. & R. Vote on Beer Bill Better Than Legislative Poll

A correspondent criticises our editorial of recent date to the effect that the vote in favor of the light wine and beer bill, submitted to the people of Massachusetts on a referendum vote at the last election, was not a satisfactory expression of the will of the people of the State. Our correspondent says:

You always advocated the Initiative and Referendum. To you alone is to be attributed its adoption by the people of the State. I myself voted for it because your editorials persuaded me that it was right. I am still of the opinion. Have you changed, or do you believe in it only when it works your way?

We believe most devotedly in the Initiative and Referendum whether it works our way or does not. There is nothing that we said, or at least meant to say, about the significance of the vote on the wine and beer bill that is inconsistent with all we have ever said about the Initiative and Referendum. If the bill were within the power of the people of Massachusetts to enact, we should, even under the peculiar circumstances in which the vote was cast, humbly bow to the result.

In arguing for the Initiative and Referendum we never said that every expression of opinion under it would be a perfect expression of public opinion. We said that it would be more expressive of public opinion than the Legislature would give us, and we say so still. In our judgment this vote is a better expression of public opinion that the legislative vote for prohibition. But we repeat that it is not satisfactory, and since, for reasons quite apart from the character of the vote itself, the vote is not final or conclusive, we repeat that we hope that it will have a more thorough discussion the next time, when we feel sure that the beneficent results of prohibition will be even more apparent than they are today.

Judge Landis as Baseball Head Would Restore Confidence

The proposal to make Judge Landis of the United States Court for Illinois the head of a Board of Trustees, to be composed of men like him, which shall control the great National Baseball League, appears at first blush to be a fine suggestion. Anything which would restore the confidence of the American people in their great national sport would be a good thing for the sport and a good thing for the people.

Of course, the suggestion that the government itself undertake to regulate baseball is not feasible, for it is entirely beyond the scope of the functions of government. But those interested in baseball can voluntarily subject themselves to the regulation of those whose judgments would be beyond their control just as the moving picture interests have voluntarily submitted their pictures to the censorship of a group of men of such standing as gives the public confidence that their criticism will be independent and disinterested.

The feeling that baseball is not on the level destroys the interest of tens of thousands in the sport and humiliates all the rest to think that they have become excited over a simple frame-up.

Therefore the control of the sport by a body of distinguished, disinterested men, beyond the reach of those who would be tempted to degrade the sport, will be satisfactory.

Governor Bartlett Did Good Work Against the League

Governor Bartlett of New Hampshire has written the following letter:

Editor Boston American:

Dear Sir—The publicity which you gave to the dangers of the League of Nations deserves recognition from all who sincerely believe we have been saved from them. I trust you will also assist in taking as long a step as is safe and wise toward some possible and practical solution of the "war problem." Yours very truly, JOHN H. BARTLETT,

Nov. 5, 1920. Governor of New Hampshire.

We thank him most sincerely for this commendation of our course toward the League of Nations.

It is only fair to say that our political editor who heard Governor Bartlett speak in other sections of the country reports that there were few men on the stump against the League of Nations so effective as Governor Bartlett. He argued the case with a lawyer like logic and clearness.

Keep Up Good Work of Making Boston Dry, Mr. McCarthy

The great activity of the Federal agents enforcing the prohibition law we regard with especial satisfaction. It followed our stories of the possibilities of buying liquor in Boston in spite of the prohibition law.

These stories were told, not in criticism of Mr. McCarthy, chief of the enforcing squad of the Federal agents, but in supplement of his work. So we cannot help believing that the greater activities of the Federal agents, after the publication of these stories, may be attributed to the assistance which these stories gave to the Federal officers. If so, we are very glad indeed, for we want prohibition to be successful, and in order to be successful we must all aid in the work of enforcement. Keep up the good work, Mr. McCarthy.

It Can Come Back

As Mr. Hearst said yesterday:
"Let the Democratic Party get back its Democrats by getting back to Democracy.
"Then it can win as completely as it has now lost, for as Samuel J. Tilden truly said: 'The Democratic Party will win whenever it has the courage to be DEMOCRATIC.'"

More Truth Than Poetry

The Even Break

By S. E. KISER

If each might have one dear wish granted,
what form would your wish take?
The jilted girl would wish the jilter's unmanly heart would break;
The man who has to plow the land would wish to go to sea—
These things, of course, we understand, but what would your wish be?

The man whose hair has all departed, no doubt, would wish for hair;
The beggar would be busy wishing to be a millionaire;
The culprit in the gloomy cell would wish he might be free—
These things we all know very well, but what would your wish be?

The ancient maiden would be wishing she might be youthful yet;
The man whose conscience makes him wakeful would wish he might forget;
For one contentment, one the stuff that helps to start a spree—
Such hopes are commonplace enough, but what would your wish be?

The youthful father, yawning sadly, who has to walk the floor,
Would wish his baby might be troubled by tummy-ache no more;
If I could gouge all people who are overcharging me,
I think that my wish would come true, but what would your wish be?

Ireland and the Red Cross

The Boston American has received several letters asking why the Red Cross did not send aid to Ireland. A typical letter consisting this query was sent to the local headquarters of the Red Cross for their answer.

Editor Boston American:

Dear Sir—Apropos of the Red Cross drive, which you mention editorially.

It has been reported in the press that the Red Cross has refused to go into Ireland to succor the women and children who are in extremity owing to the destruction of creameries and other industrial plants, as well as of thousands of homes.

Can you substantiate or deny this report? In view of the great necessity of the times, it seems to me that it would be well to settle this question for the satisfaction of many who have he' l membership in the Red Cross in the belief that its mission was to relieve great need in whatever country it existed. Sincerely,

MARY AUGUSTINE DWYER.

Red Cross Answer

Editor Boston American:

Dear Sir—The question has been raised as to why the Red Cross is not extending aid to suffering Ireland. We wish to have it understood that the Red Cross has not refused to give relief to the people of Ireland. In fact, the Red Cross has never been appealed to by the people of Ireland for aid.

A request has come from friends of Ireland in this country asking us for help. We have taken steps to find out the conditions in Ireland by cabling the Red Cross Commission in Europe, asking it to take up this question with the League of Red Cross Societies which has been organized as the great Red Cross clearing house of the world, with headquarters at Geneva, and any new work contemplated by the continent members must be passed upon by the league.

Although the statement that the Red Cross knows neither race, creed nor politics has been made many times, it seems to me it can bear repeating. Its mission is to relieve and prevent all suffering. If it is shown there is need for the American Red Cross in Ireland, the Red Cross will do everything in its power to meet the situation.

The roll call began yesterday. Certainly the world is out of joint. The appeals made to us are innumerable and most urgent. I sincerely hope that the people will respond to the call by renewing their allegiance and joining the Red Cross for 1921. ARTHUR G. ROTCH,

Division Manager American Red Cross.

DEAR K. C. B.: Every year we have sent you our savings for the Christmas Basket Fund, and our daddy says it has started, and so we are sending you three dollars which we have saved up for Santa Claus.

We always get a lot of nice things on Christmas, and we hope that this money will help buy something nice for some poor kiddies who have no father.

HONEY, BUSTER AND RUTH.

LAST CHRISTMAS,
WHEN THOUSANDS came
TO GET dinners.
THAT WERE supplied,
BY OUR Christmas Fund.
THERE CAME two girls,
AND A little boy.
THAT I recall.
AS I sit here now.
FOR THEY came in.
EACH HOLDING hands,
AND TIMIDLY,
AND LOOKED about,
WITH ANXIOUS air,
AS THOUGH in fear.
THEY'D BE put out.
AND WHAT they wore,
FOR WINTER clothes.
WERE VERY thin,
AND DIDN'T fit.

THEY REALLY looked,
FOR ALL the world,
LIKE PICTURES look,
THAT ARTISTS draw,
OF ILL-CLAD kids,
WHO GAZE in shops,
ON CHRISTMAS Eve,
AND HAVE no hope,
OF SANTA Claus,
AND SO they stood,
TILL SOMEONE came,
AND FILLED their arms,
WITH THINGS to eat,
THAT'S WHAT was done,
WITH THE money saved,
AND SENT to us,
BY HONEY and Buster,
AND SISTER Ruth.

I THANK you.

STRENGTH, COURAGE WIN OUT IN LIFE

MR. JACOB C. ULLERY of Brattleboro, Vt., has just published a little booklet entitled "On Getting On," which is full of sound advice. I cull from its pages the following ideas, which may be interesting, not only intrinsically, but because of the names attached to them. For instance:

Ex-President Taft: "You cannot get on unless you work. The harder you work, the more certain you are to get on."

Nicholas Murray Butler: "I would ask three simple things of one who wants to get on. I would ask him to improve his speech, to improve his manners and to improve his standards of taste."

Herbert Hoover: "Go back to the simple life, be contented with simple food, simple pleasures, simple clothes."

J. Ogden Armour: "Enthusiasm is the dynamics of personality."

John D. Rockefeller: "When I was a boy of thirteen or fourteen I discovered it was a good thing to let money be my servant and not to make myself a slave to money."

A. Mitchell Palmer: "Determine to make your dreams come true."

Hamlin Garland: "One of the fundamental laws of mental efficiency is concentration."

Lyman Abbott "The whole wisdom of life lies simply in doing the thing that is right and letting God look after the consequences."

Henry Watterson: "To be kindly honest, fearless, capable—that is all."

Charles M. Schwab: "A man will succeed in anything in which he is generally interested, provided he will take more thought about his job than the men working with him."

John Wanamaker: "It was not setting type in a printing office that made Benjamin Franklin the envoy to foreign courts. It was his studies and his thinking."

Admiral Mayo: "The secret of getting on is loyalty to God, to country, to family and self."

Robert E. Peary: "If you do not learn to keep up your courage in spite of occasional failure, you will not get far on the road to success."

George Ade: "Very often a slipshod product is marketable, but you must deliver good goods and keep on delivering if you expect to get into Class A and remain there."

David Belasco: "Application, wisely practiced, develops a temperament which allows no obstacle to stand in one's way."

Thomas A. Edison: "The three great essentials to achieve anything worth while are: First, hard work; second, stick-to-it-iveness; third, common sense."

Calvin Coolidge: "Expect to be called a demagogue, but don't be a demagogue."

Theodore N. Vail: "Imagination is necessary to grasp what is new or original, but it must be backed by powers of observation, concentration and reflection."

Louis F. Swift: "Advice which I have given employes is good for all young men. That is, 'Get in debt.'"

Hoke Smith: "Patient persistence."

John Sharp Williams: "If I have any particular advice concerning the upbuilding of character it is for one not to tie oneself too closely to authorities, creeds, cliques or clans."

E. W. Howe: "You lack ordinary sense if you believe roguery pays. There is not one man in a thousand capable of being a successful rogue, while any one may succeed as an honest man."

It is rather difficult to sum up all these conclusions and get their practical gist.

The one underlying thought, however, seems to be clear. It is that all these men had two qualities and that really they are looking at these two qualities from varying angles.

The two are courage and optimism.

The first step in success is to conquer fear.

And no soul ever proved itself great that did not have faith, that did not believe in itself and its star.

The best advice still for youth is what the Lord said to Joshua when He sent him out to take the Promised Land:

Smiles

The World Improves.

Mosquitoes cease to come to sip
Our precious life blood while we dream;
The morning breeze begins to nip,
No flies are dropping in the cream.

OLD 999 A MARVEL OF SPEED IN 1891

By Damon Runyon

Copyright, 1920, by Star Company.

OUR town was a railroad town, and every boy aspired to be a railroader, preferably an engineer.

We had two great trains—the "Cannon Ball" and the "Nellie Bly"—the latter a Santa Fe flyer named for the famous lady who now writes for The New York Evening Journal.

The men at the throttles of the engines which pulled these trains were the beau ideals of the kids of our community. To us their station was more imposing than that of President of the United States.

However, we had heard from the lips of the railroad men of a marvelous train somewhere back in the mystic East, a train more wonderful than the "Cannon Ball" or the "Nellie Bly," which was called the Empire State Express.

This train, we heard, was drawn by a remarkable engine of such mechanical prowess that it became a figure of speech in describing speed. It was known as the 999. The engineers of the "Cannon Ball" and the "Nellie Bly" were great men, but the man at the throttle of the 999 was a sort of superman, as we understood it, driving a super engine.

The other day I picked up a little magazine issued by the New York Central lines, and behold, there was the story of the engine which once roared through my youthful dreams of romance and adventure!

It seems that the 999 is still in existence, though it no longer pulls the Empire State Express. It is now hauling local trains No. 39 and No. 37, which run between Jersey Shore Junction and Patton on the Pennsylvania division in the Beech Creek coal mining district.

Like the race horse which age and infirmity consigns to a delivery wagon, the once proud 999 has sunk to rather a lowly estate. But it seems that it looks just about the same as in the days when it was thundering along the tracks of fame and glory, except that it now has an electric headlight and modern safety appliances. It is numbered 1086.

Twenty-nine years ago, October 26, 1891, the Empire State Express made its first Western trip, running from New York to Buffalo. It covered the 439 miles in eight hours, with stops at Albany, Utica, Syracuse and Rochester. Exclusive of stops, the speed was approximately sixty miles an hour.

This speed astounded the country. The Empire State Express became internationally famous. It is still pretty well known, but the running time has been lengthened to nine hours.

In May, 1893, with the 999 pulling the train, the Empire State Express hung up a record of 112.5 miles per hour. This sensational performance set the whole world buzzing.

The story in the magazine tells us that the 999 was designed by the late William Buchanan, for many years superintendent of motive power of the New York Central. However, much credit for the speed attained by the engine is given Dr. Plimmon H. Dudley, then and now consulting engineer of rails, tires and structural steel.

Charles Hogan was at the throttle of the 999 that day. Hogan is now manager of the department of shop labor at Buffalo. He was born in 1850, and at fifteen was a track hand on the Lake Shore Railroad at $33 per month. He became a locomotive engineer in 1870.

In the nineties an engine on the London & Northwestern Railroad, known as the Great Britain, was knocking records right and left, but the 999 put all other mechanical speed devices in the shade.

The 999 pulled a four-car train, and the passengers in the cars knew they were moving along. The Twentieth Century Limited, running between New York and Chicago, was put on ten years after the Empire State as the last word in railroad speed and luxury, but somehow the Twentieth Century has never carried the same glamour as the old Buffalo train.

Stars and Stripes

Many a man prides himself on a sharp intellect when it is often merely the thin edge of a narrow mind.

There's nothing cowardly about a profiteer; according to Shakespeare it takes conscience to make cowards of us.

Doctors live by our diseases, lawyers by our quarrels, ministers by our sins and teachers by our ignorance.
